

Contents

- List of Illustrations* page [xi]
Acknowledgements [xiii]
- 1 The Afterlife of a ‘Beaten Ghost’ [1]
 Lateness and Modernism [5]
 Musical and Literary Modernisms [11]
 - 2 Sketch of a Milieu: Impasse and Lateness [16]
 The Café Royal and Wartime London [17]
 Cornwall and Garsington; The Athenaeum and The New Age [23]
 Untimeliness, Impasse and Lateness [26]
 ‘Men of 1914’ [30]
 - 3 Impersonality and Vividness: ‘Le Gai Savaire’,
 Philip Heseltine and D. H. Lawrence [35]
 Impersonality and the Process of Becoming Late [43]
 Vividness, and its Implications [46]
 Heseltine and Lawrence Meet [52]
 The Spirit of Delius, and Lawrence’s Poppy [58]
 Heseltine the Unborn [64]
 Blood Consciousness [72]
 Failed Utopias and False Messiahs [77]
 - 4 Modernism, Democracy and the Politics of
 Lateness: Kaikhosru Sorabji and The New Age [85]
 Anti-Democratic Politics and Modernist Aesthetics in The New Age [90]
 Against ‘Equality’ [101]
 The Classical Temperament [108]
 The ‘Mass Production of Minds, Tastes and Thoughts’ [114]
 Mimicry and the Death of the Spectator [117]
 - 5 Cycles, Rotation and the Image: Cecil Gray’s Music
 History and H. D.’s Imagism [123]
 Time and the Idea of Sibelius [125]
 The Character of ‘Modern Classicism’ [130]
 Cyclic Histories and Modernism [135]
 Image, Vortex and Turbine: Poetic Cycles [139]

Gray's Critique of Linear Music History [146]
Spontaneity of Being and Form [153]
The Future's Past [155]

Select Bibliography [159]

Index [169]