

WTO MINISTERIAL CONFERENCES

WTO Ministerial Conferences: Key Outcomes contains all the key outcomes from World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial Conferences since the organization was established in 1995. Covering 11 Ministerial Conferences held between 1996 and 2017, the key outcomes include Ministerial Decisions and Declarations as well as Chairpersons' statements. This publication also reproduces relevant Ministerial outcomes of the Uruguay Round adopted in connection with the establishment of the WTO.

This publication complements The WTO Agreements, recently published by Cambridge University Press and the WTO, which contains the Marrakesh Agreement Establishing the WTO and its Annexes.

PREFACE

The Ministerial Conference is the highest-level decision-making body of the WTO, and usually meets every two years. In the intervals between meetings of the Ministerial Conference, its functions are conducted by the General Council.

Part I of this publication covers the eleven sessions of the WTO Ministerial Conference held between 1996 (Singapore) and 2017 (Buenos Aires) and compiles a selection of key outcome documents, such as Ministerial Decisions and Declarations and relevant Chairpersons' statements. Other documents, such as WTO accession packages, summary records and Members' submissions, are not reproduced. Related decisions and other actions taken by the General Council in the intervals between meetings of the Ministerial Conference are also not reproduced.

Part II of this publication reproduces the Ministerial outcomes of the Uruguay Round adopted in connection with the establishment of the WTO.

The present publication complements the publication The WTO Agreements, which reproduces the WTO Agreement and its Annexes.

The above editorial choices have no implications as to the status of specific outcome documents. This compilation reflects the original footnote numbers and symbols of the documents reproduced herein. Editorial notes introduced under this compilation are marked with a letter.
