

HUMAN RIGHTS & SOCIAL WORK

4TH EDITION

Towards Rights-based Practice

Human Rights & Social Work: Towards Rights-based Practice helps students and practitioners understand how human rights concepts underpin the social work profession and inform their practice.

This book critically examines the three generations of human rights and the systems of oppression that prevent citizens from participating in society as equals. It explores a range of topics and concepts, from ethics and ethical social work practice, to deductive and inductive approaches to human rights, and global and local human rights discourses. The language, processes, structures and theories of social work that are fundamental to the profession are also discussed and critiqued.

The fourth edition features new case studies that explore current events, movements and human rights crises, including the Black Lives Matter movement, the Northern Territory Emergency Response, the #FreeBritney campaign, and the issues of child labour in the Global South and homelessness among LGBTIQ+ young people. This edition is accompanied by online resources for both students and instructors.

Human Rights & Social Work: Towards Rights-based Practice is an indispensable guide for contemporary social work students and practitioners aiming to become well-rounded human rights social workers.

Emeritus Professor Jim Ife has been a professor of social work at several universities, and was foundation Handa Professor of Human Rights Education at Curtin University. He is a former President of Amnesty International Australia, and has been active in various community groups.

Professor Karen Soldatić is Professor, School of Social Sciences, and Institute Fellow, Institute for Culture and Society, Western Sydney University. Karen's research engages with critical questions of inequality, human rights and social injustice. She obtained her PhD (Distinction) in 2010 from the University of Western Australia.

Professor Linda Briskman is a human rights activist. In her role as Margaret Whitlam Chair of Social Work at Western Sydney University she teaches, conducts research and writes on Indigenous rights, asylum seeker rights and challenging racism, particularly Islamophobia.

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Emeritus Professor Jim Ife holds honorary positions at the Centre for Human Rights Education at Curtin University, Perth, Western Australia; the Centre for Citizenship and Human Rights at Deakin University; Western Sydney University; and Victoria University, Melbourne. He is a former secretary of the Human Rights Commission of the International Federation of Social Workers and is also a former president of Amnesty International Australia. Previously, he was Professor of Social Work and Social Policy at the University of Western Australia and at Curtin University. His other publications include Community Development (3rd edition, 2006), Rethinking Social Work: Towards Critical Practice (1997) and Human Rights from Below: Human Rights and Community Development (2010).

Professor Karen Soldatić, School of Social Sciences and Institute Fellow, Institute for Culture and Society, Western Sydney University, was awarded a Fogarty Foundation Excellence in Education Fellowship for 2006–09, a British Academy International Fellowship in 2012, a fellowship at the Centre for Human Rights Education at Curtin University (2011–12), and an Australian Research Council DECRA Fellowship (2016–19). Her research on global welfare regimes builds on her 20 years of experience as an international (Cambodia, Sri Lanka, Indonesia), national and state-based senior policy analyst, researcher and practitioner. She obtained her PhD (Distinction) in 2010 from the University of Western Australia.

Professor Linda Briskman holds the Margaret Whitlam Chair of Social Work at Western Sydney University. She previously held the Dr Haruhisa Handa Chair of Human Rights Education at Curtin University (following Jim Ife) and Professor of Human Rights at Swinburne University. She conducts research, writes and advocates for the rights of Indigenous peoples and asylum seekers as well as challenging racism, including Islamophobia. She is a former president of the Australian Council of Heads of Schools of Social Work and a current member of the management committee of the Australian Council for Human Rights Education. Her publications include the co-edited Indigenous Bioethics: An Appeal to Human Rights, co-edited Social Work in the Shadow of the Law (2018), Social Work with Indigenous Communities: A Human Rights Approach (2014), and she co-authored Human Rights Overboard: Seeking Asylum in Australia (2008). She has won awards for her work.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

For the authors of a book to claim that the ideas it contains are all their own is both false and arrogant. Ideas are shared, developed and reconstructed through a process of continuous dialogue, reading and collaborative praxis, and any claim to individual ‘ownership’ of such ideas in the form of ‘intellectual property’ is a nonsense. Simply writing ideas in a book, with its corresponding claim to ownership and authority, is to privilege the authors over others who have had a major influence in the creative endeavour and is, for we three authors at least, a source of some discomfort. Many people have contributed, often unknowingly, to the ideas in this book and it would be impossible to acknowledge, or even to remember, them all. From our experience and collective knowledge, we owe a great deal to many encounters with students, colleagues and friends in several different universities and in the wider community.

Although many people made contributions to the first edition of the book (2001), which set the scene for all editions, we make special mention of Louise Morley, who made a substantial contribution at that time with her invaluable assistance with library research, and also through her constructive input, her critical analysis and her enthusiasm for dialogue. Others have made substantial contributions to the current edition. We are grateful to Liz Magee, who undertook a fieldwork placement with the authors as part of her social work degree at Deakin University, assisted in updating references and content, and wrote three case studies. Aminath Didi provided much needed administrative support and we are grateful for her eye for detail. Valuable contributions were made to the development of some of the case studies by Jason Lal, Ashley Liao and Niroshini Kandasamy.
