

CONTENTS

FOREWORD PAGE vii

PREFACE xiii

PART I

CHAPTER I I

Gold standard 1925—The London Money Market—Change in characteristics—The importance of the Treasury Bill—Two-way flow of funds—Britain's economic and financial deterioration—Dollar and franc credits—Gold losses—Gold standard suspension

CHAPTER 2 8

Conditions before the creation of the Exchange Equalisation Account—Return of confidence in sterling—Repayment of dollar and franc credits—The Bank of England's limited power—The need for another agency—The establishment of the E.E.A.—The purpose of the E.E.A.—Borrowing powers—Principles of working

CHAPTER 3 15

Field of operations—Description of markets—E.E.A. in action in Exchange Market—An imaginary transaction—Exchange operation and offsetting thereto—The result produced—Technique

CHAPTER 4 20

Change in characteristics of the E.E.A.—The four phases—The dollar phase—The franc phase—The Tripartite Agreement phase—The gold phase

Résumé of Part I 27

PART II

CHAPTER 5 29

The Bank of England weekly statement—Explanation of items—Issue Department—Banking Department—Proportion—Reserve ratio—Bank Rate—Open-market policy

CHAPTER 6 39

Short-loan market—Treasury Bills, tender and tap—E.E.A. in action in Money Market—Effect on cash ratios—Effect on Bank of England balances—Difference between a sale of Treasury Bills to the Bank of England and the Money Market—Comparative effects of influx of capital under gold standard and managed currency standard with offsetting operations by E.E.A.—Secondary offsetting operations

CHAPTER 7	PAGE 50
Deflation by France to maintain gold franc—Flight of capital from France and other countries to London in 1936—Large gold acquisitions by E.E.A.—Nature of foreign-owned assets—Their effect on the money structure—Restrictive effect—Secondary offsetting operations—Sales of gold to Bank of England—Illustrative figures—Greater restrictive effect of hoarded notes

Key to movements following an assumed influx of foreign capital	*
---	---

CHAPTER 8	63
Continued fall of the franc—Further gold acquisitions by the E.E.A.—Increase in its borrowing powers—The Daladier franc—The British declaration—Undervaluation of Daladier franc—Repatriation of £80 millions to France—The smoothness of the operation—Cleaning up the effects in the London market—Passing of initiative to French control—Piling-up of funds in Public Deposits—Nature of assets before conversion—Reversal of operations—Delay in replacing lost funds—Expedients adopted—Thwarting influences at work

Key to movements following an assumed efflux of foreign capital	*
---	---

PART III

CHAPTER 9	78
Cost of financing gold assets—The importance of gold to the E.E.A.—Control of gold price through monopoly—Indirect control of sterling-dollar exchange rate—Gold holdings—Accounting losses on gold transfers—Finance Act clauses—Reconstruction of assets and liabilities—Jobbing profits—Disposal of profits—Special nature of gold sales against a reduction in Fiduciary Issue—Reasons for transfer

Attempted reconstruction of official figures of the E.E.A.	*
--	---

CHAPTER 10	88
Sterling gold price—How it is fixed—Supply and demand—American and Belgian gold prices—Theoretical parities—Effective shipping parities—When shipments to America or Belgium are profitable—“Premium” and “discount”—Triangular analogy—Automatic balance

CHAPTER 11	PAGE 98
Liquid resources of the E.E.A.—Treasury Bills—Unexercised means of borrowing—E.E.A. Treasury Bills contra Public department Treasury Bills—Interplay of weekly allotment of Treasury Bills and maturities—Other purposes of tender issue—The financing of the E.E.A. gold holdings and immobilised funds—Funding and Defence Loans—Bearing upon E.E.A.—Qualifications of offsetting principle—Mr J. M. Keynes' contention
CHAPTER 12	108
Distribution of gold holdings—Causes of change in ownership—The gold scare—The dollar scare—Devaluation rumours—Overvaluation of sterling—Pressure on sterling—Large gold losses—Changes in the “premium”—Arbitraged gold—The dilemma of the E.E.A.—Further gold losses from particular causes—Swing over from E.E.A. to hoards—Considerable range
CHAPTER 13	119
The crisis period—Extensive operations by E.E.A.—Lower dollar exchange rates—Accumulation of funds in Public Deposits—Offsetting methods—New technique—Swap operations—Conflicting features in money and gold situations—Doctrine of offsetting qualified—E.E.A. preparedness—Normal conditions
CHAPTER 14	128
The E.E.A. as an experiment—Its success—Tests applied—Criticisms—Proposal of Professor Rist—The danger to the E.E.A.—Restatement of essentials—Adequacy of gold holdings—Sterling funds in London—Sterling area countries operating a gold exchange standard—Better distribution of gold—Enlargement of sterling area—Dangers of the position—Conflict of short-term and long-term aims—Achievements
ADDENDA	143
Currency and Bank Notes Act 1939	152
APPENDIX
A. Gold Standard Act 1925	155
B. Currency and Bank Notes Act 1928	157
C. Gold Standard (Amendment) Act 1931	164

D. Finance Act 1932 (E.E.A. clauses)	PAGE 166
E. Tripartite Currency Agreement	169
F. Two protocols to Tripartite Currency Agreement	171
G. Figures relating to influx of capital 1936	173
H. Figures relating to efflux of capital 1938	175
I. Figures relating to the period of the European crisis 1938	176
J. Gold imports and distribution	*
K. Gold values of principal currencies on 30 June 1938	179
L. Sterling-dollar exchange rates 1931–38	180
M. Sterling-franc exchange rates 1931–38	181
GLOSSARY	182
INDEX	189

* This four tables are available for download from www.cambridge.org/9781316611715