

Cambridge University Press
978-1-316-61650-5 — The Rights Revolution Revisited
Edited by Lynda G. Dodd
Frontmatter
More Information

---

THE RIGHTS REVOLUTION REVISITED

The rights revolution in the United States consisted of both sweeping changes in constitutional doctrines and landmark legislative reform, followed by decades of innovative implementation in every branch of the federal government – Congress, agencies, and the courts. In recent years, a growing number of political scientists have sought to integrate studies of the rights revolution into accounts of the contemporary American state. In The Rights Revolution Revisited, a distinguished group of political scientists and legal scholars explore the institutional dynamics, scope, and durability of the rights revolution. By offering an interbranch analysis of the development of civil rights laws and policies that features the role of private enforcement, this volume enriches our understanding of the rise of the “civil rights state” and its fate in the current era.

Lynda G. Dodd is the Joseph H. Flom Professor of Legal Studies and Political Science at the City University of New York, City College. She graduated from Yale Law School in 2000, completed a PhD in Politics at Princeton University in 2004, and was a member of the law school faculty at American University’s Washington College of Law from 2005 to 2010. Her book, Taming the Rights Revolution: The Supreme Court, Constitutional Torts, and the Elusive Quest for Accountability, examines the history of civil rights litigation under Section 1983 and will be published by Cambridge University Press.

The Rights Revolution Revisited

INSTITUTIONAL PERSPECTIVES ON THE PRIVATE
ENFORCEMENT OF CIVIL RIGHTS IN THE US

Edited by
LYNDA G. DODD

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
978-1-316-61650-5 — The Rights Revolution Revisited
Edited by Lynda G. Dodd
Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom
One Liberty Plaza, 20th Floor, New York, NY 10006, USA
477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia
314–321, 3rd Floor, Plot 3, Splendor Forum, Jasola District Centre, New Delhi – 110025, India
79 Anson Road, #06-04/06, Singapore 079906

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107164734
DOI: 10.1017/9781316691199

© Cambridge University Press 2018

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2018

Printed in the United States of America by Sheridan Books, Inc.

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library.

ISBN 978-1-107-16473-4 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-316-61650-5 — The Rights Revolution Revisited
Edited by Lynda G. Dodd
Frontmatter
More Information

---

For Matthew

Contents

|  |                |
|--|----------------|
| List of Figures   | page ix |
| List of Tables  | x              |
| List of Contributors  | xi             |
| Acknowledgments   | xvii           |
| PART I INTRODUCTION   |                |
| 1 Reassessing the Rights RevolutionLynda G. Dodd   | 3              |
| PART II IMPLEMENTING THE RIGHTS REVOLUTION  |                |
| 2 Approaches to Enforcing the Rights Revolution: Private CivilRights Litigation and the American BureaucracyQuinn Mulroy       | 27             |
| 3 Mobilizing Rights at the Agency Level: The First Interpretationsof Title VII's Sex ProvisionJennifer Woodward                | 46             |
| 4 Motivating Litigants to Enforce Public Goods: Evidence fromEmployment, Housing, and Voting Discrimination PolicyPaul Gardner | 70             |
| 5 Regulatory Rights: Civil Rights Agencies, Courts, and theEntrenchment of Language RightsMing Hsu Chen                        | 100            |

|  |   |     |
|--|---|-----|
| 6  | Sexual Harassment and the Evolving Civil Rights StateR. Shep Melnick   | 123 |
| 7  | The Civil Rights Template and the Americans with Disabilities Act: A Sociolegal Perspective on the Promise and Limits of Individual RightsThomas F. Burke and Jeb Barnes | 167 |
| PART III RIGHTS AND RETRENCHMENT            |   |     |
| 8  | Retrenching Civil Rights Litigation: Why the Court Succeeded Where Congress FailedStephen B. Burbank and Sean Farhang  | 197 |
| 9  | The Contours of the Supreme Court's Civil Rights CounterrevolutionLynda G. Dodd  | 224 |
| 10   | Constraining Aid, Retrenching Access: Legal Services after the Rights RevolutionSarah Staszak  | 267 |
| PART IV THE FUTURE OF THE RIGHTS REVOLUTION |   |     |
| 11   | Rationalizing Rights: Political Control of LitigationDavid Freeman Engstrom  | 295 |
| 12   | The Future of Private Enforcement of Civil RightsLynda G. Dodd   | 322 |
|  | Bibliography   | 349 |
|  | Index  | 375 |

Figures

|     |  |                |
|-----|--|----------------|
| 2.1 | Private fair housing litigation (thin line with hollow points) and private equal employment opportunity litigation (thick line with solid points) filed in the US District Courts, 1970–2008 | page 43 |
| 4.1 | Cases filed by issue area, 1977–2012   | 72             |
| 4.2 | Expected plaintiff and support   | 76             |
| 4.3 | Interest groups as mediators to litigation   | 78             |
| 4.4 | The effect of interest group concentration on lawsuit filings  | 83             |
| 8.1 | Federal civil rights litigation rate, and its share of the statutory civil docket  | 198            |
| 8.2 | Sum of civil rights litigation reform items sponsored and co-sponsored   | 207            |
| 8.3 | Case outcomes and justices votes in civil rights private enforcement cases   | 218            |
| 8.4 | Case outcomes and justices votes in all civil rights cases   | 219            |

Tables

|      |   |                |
|------|---|----------------|
| 3.1  | Race and sex-based claims investigated, deferred, or required more information 1965–1968  | page 52 |
| 3.2  | Number of claims recommended for investigation  | 54             |
| 4.1  | Results   | 82             |
| 4.2  | Awards and fees by policy area  | 84             |
| 6.1  | Title VII and Title IX sexual harassment chronology   | 135            |
| 7.1  | Summary of organizations  | 189            |
| 7.2  | Comparison of organizational responses: relative levels of commitment, professionalization, and routinization   | 189            |
| 7.3  | Summary of access scores  | 190            |
| 8.1  | Negative binomial model of legislator support for anti-private enforcement Civil Rights Provisions with Congress Fixed Effects, 1973–1980   | 209            |
| 8.2  | Negative binomial coefficients for party and south in models of support for anti-private enforcement civil rights provisions, with Congress-fixed effects, by presidential administration | 210            |
| 8.3  | Percent pro-private enforcement votes in civil rights cases   | 216            |
| 8.4  | Logit model of justice votes on private enforcement civil rights issues, with case fixed effects  | 220            |
| 11.1 | Menu of litigation control tools  | 306            |
| 11.2 | Ideal retail gatekeeper tasks   | 313            |

Contributors

Jeb Barnes is an associate professor in political science at the University of Southern California, where he teaches courses on law, public policy, and institutional analysis. His writing focuses on the role of rights, courts, and litigation in the policymaking process and mixed-method research strategies. He has published numerous law-related articles in peer-review journals, including Law & Society Review and Law & Social Inquiry, and five books: Overruled? Legislative Overrides, Pluralism, and Contemporary Court-Congress Relations (2004), Making Policy, Making Law: An Interbranch Perspective (2004) (co-edited with Mark C. Miller), Dust-Up: Asbestos Litigation and the Failure of Common Sense Reform (2011), Finding Pathways: Mixed-Methods Research for Studying Causal Mechanism (Cambridge University Press, 2014) (with Nicholas Weller), and How Policy Makes Politics: Adversarial Legalism and the Politics of the Litigation State (2014) (with Thomas F. Burke).

Stephen B. Burbank is the David Berger Professor for the Administration of Justice and Professor of Law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He is the author of definitive works on federal court rulemaking, interjurisdictional preclusion, litigation sanctions, international civil litigation, and judicial independence and accountability. He is coeditor (with Barry Friedman) of Judicial Independence at the Crossroads: An Interdisciplinary Approach (2002). His 1982 article, “The Rules Enabling Act of 1934,” reoriented the theory and practice of court rulemaking. Burbank’s recent scholarship includes a detailed study of the Class Action Fairness Act of 2005 in historical perspective, an analysis of different approaches to the study of judicial behavior in law and political science, an article (with Sean Farhang and Bert Kritzer) on private enforcement of statutory and administrative law in the United States, an empirical study of the retirement decisions of federal judges, and a series of articles with Sean Farhang leading to a book, Rights and Retrenchment: The Counterrevolution against Federal Litigation (Cambridge University Press, 2016). Burbank was appointed by the Speaker of the US House of Representatives to the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal and was a principal author of the Commission's 1993 report.

Thomas F. Burke is Professor of Political Science at Wellesley College. He has been a visiting professor at Harvard and at the University of California, Berkeley, and a research fellow at the Brookings Institution and with the Robert Wood Johnson Scholars in Health Policy Program. Burke's research focuses on the place of rights and litigation in public policy, and the ways in which organizations respond to rights laws. He is the author with Jeb Barnes of How Policy Shapes Politics (2015), which examines the political consequences of the judicialization of politics. Burke has written about American campaign finance law, disability law, and politics both in the United States and Europe, the effects of same-sex marriage litigation on the gay and lesbian rights movement, and the challenges of scholarship on rights in politics. He has coauthored with Lief Carter five editions of Reason in Law, most recently the ninth edition (2016). His dissertation, written at University of California, Berkeley, won the American Political Science Association's Edwin S. Corwin Award for best thesis in public law; it was published as Lawyers, Lawsuits and Legal Rights: The Struggle over Litigation in American Society (2002).

Ming Hsu Chen is an associate professor of Law and Political Science at the University of Colorado in Boulder. Professor Chen's research and teaching concern the regulation of immigration, race, and civil rights. Prior to entering legal academia, Ming clerked for the US Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit in San Francisco. She earned a PhD in Jurisprudence and Social Policy at the University of California, Berkeley; a JD at New York University Law School; and an AB from Harvard College.

Lynda G. Dodd is the Joseph H. Flom Professor of Legal Studies and Political Science at the City University of New York – City College, where her teaching and research focus on American political and constitutional development, constitutional law and theory, jurisprudence, and civil rights litigation. She graduated from Yale Law School in 2000 and completed a PhD in politics at Princeton University in 2004. She has previously worked as a litigation associate at Sidley Austin, and at the Brennan Center for Justice at the New York University School of Law. She has taught political science courses to undergraduate students at a number of universities and colleges including Princeton, Yale, and Wellesley, and she was a member of the law faculty at American University's Washington College of Law from 2005 to 2010. Dodd's recent scholarship examines the political and legal debates regarding civil rights litigation under Section 1983, from its origins in the Civil Rights Act of 1871 to the Roberts Court era. Currently, she is completing a book on this subject, Taming the Rights Revolution: The Supreme Court, Constitutional Torts, and the Elusive Quest for Accountability, to be published by Cambridge University Press.

David Freeman Engstrom is Professor of Law and Bernard D. Bergreen Faculty Scholar at Stanford Law School. His teaching and scholarship focus on the institutional design of litigation and regulatory regimes, as well as topics in administrative law, civil procedure, constitutional law, civil rights, and law and education. He recently completed the first large-scale empirical investigation of qui tam litigation under the False Claims Act. Current work includes a book examining the institutional origins and evolution of American job discrimination law. Previously, Professor Engstrom was a law clerk to Judge Diane P. Wood of the US Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit and a John M. Olin Fellow in Law, Economics, and Public Policy at Yale Law School. He also litigated for four years at a Washington, DC, law firm, where he represented clients before the US Supreme Court, US Courts of Appeals, and various trial courts and administrative agencies. He holds a JD from Stanford Law School, an MSc (in economic history) from Oxford University, and a PhD (in political science) from Yale University.

Sean Farhang is Professor of Law and Associate Professor of Political Science and Public Policy at the University of California, Berkeley. His work focuses mainly on civil litigation, the role of litigation and courts in regulatory implementation, and the causes and consequences of choices by Congress and the Supreme Court to mobilize or demobilize private enforcement of law through litigation. He is author of The Litigation State: Public Regulation and Private Lawsuits in the U.S. (2010), which received the Gladys M. Kammerer Award from the American Political Science Association for the best book in the field of US national policy, as well as the C. Herman Pritchett award for the best book on law and courts. His articles have appeared in political science and law and social science journals, as well as law reviews. His ongoing work includes a book project with Stephen Burbank, from which their chapter to this volume was drawn, titled Rights and Retrenchment: The Counterrevolution against Federal Litigation (Cambridge University Press, 2016). The book examines the emergence and development of the political and legal movement to restrict opportunities and incentives for private enforcement of federal law through litigation.

Paul Gardner is a postdoctoral fellow in the Department of Political Science at the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Syracuse University, and received his PhD in politics at Princeton University in 2015. His research interests include American institutions, judicial politics, American political development, and law and society. His current book project examines the role of private litigation in American politics from statutory authorization to judicial decision, arguing that litigation opens the door for political actors, particularly interest groups, to have greater influence in federal policy enforcement.

R. Shep Melnick is the Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. Professor of American Politics at Boston College. He teaches a variety of courses on American politics, including courts and public policy, ideas and institutions in American politics, bureaucracy, democracy in America, rights in conflict, and the American politics graduate field seminar. Melnick's first book, Regulation and the Courts, examined judicial influence on the development of environmental policy. His second, Between the Lines, investigated the ways in which statutory interpretation has shaped a variety of entitlement programs. His current research project looks at how the Rehnquist Court has reshaped our governing institutions. Melnick is co-chair of the Harvard Program on Constitutional Government and a past president of the New England Political Science Association. Before coming to Boston College in 1997, he had taught at Harvard and at Brandeis, where he served as chair of the Politics department. Melnick was educated at Harvard University, where he received a bachelor's degree in social studies in 1973, a master's in political science in 1978, and a doctorate in political science in 1980. He also has been associated since 1978 with the Brookings Institution.

Quinn Mulroy is an assistant professor in the School of Education & Social Policy and (by courtesy) Department of Political Science, at Northwestern University, as well as a faculty associate at the Institute for Policy Research, Northwestern University. Her research operates at the intersection of American politics, public policy, law and society, public administration, civil rights and environmental policy, and American political development. Her research engages central questions on the development of policymaking and policy implementation in the United States and has been published in the Journal of Politics and Studies in American Political Development. Her current book project investigates the role of private power, particularly that supplied by private litigation, in the American regulatory state, and uses qualitative and quantitative approaches to explore how and under what conditions regulatory agencies mobilize private actors to engage in litigation that advances regulatory goals. This project has received two awards from the American Political Science Association: the 2012 Leonard White Best Dissertation Award and the 2012 Best Conference Paper Award from the Law and Courts section. Mulroy received her PhD in political science from Columbia University in 2012. Her research has been recognized with fellowships and/or grants from the Miller Center for Public Affairs at the University of Virginia (National Fellow in Politics and History), the American Bar Foundation (Visiting Scholar), the Institute for Social and Economic Research and Policy at Columbia University (Mellon Interdisciplinary Graduate Fellow), and the Horowitz Foundation for Social Policy.

Sarah Staszak received her PhD in political science from Brandeis University in 2010 and is a research associate professor at Princeton University. From 2013 to 2015, she was a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation scholar in Health Policy Research at Harvard University and from 2012 to 2016 an assistant professor in the Department of Political Science at the City University of New York – City College. Her research interests are at the intersection of American politics, public policy, and public law, and she teaches courses on American political institutions, law and policy, and the American state. Her book, No Day in Court: Access to Justice and the Politics of Judicial Retrenchment (2015), examines the politics and implications of the efforts to constrain access to courts and the legal system as they have unfolded in the years since the expansions of the civil rights era, and a chapter was awarded the American Judicature Award by the Law and Courts Section of the American Political Science Association in 2010. She is currently working on two projects: one that focuses on the growing use of arbitration for medical malpractice and in lieu of tort litigation more broadly, and another which examines the enforcement mechanisms for the provision of the American with Disabilities Act mandating that individuals with mental illness have a right to live in the community rather than in state institutions.

Jennifer Woodward is a research fellow at the Rockefeller College of Public Affairs and Policy's Center for Policy Research. Her scholarship focuses on the development and implementation of civil rights laws in education and employment. By looking at the potential of law, courts, and government agencies to shape and be shaped by society, she evaluates the everyday encounters between individuals and the laws designed to protect them. During her career, Woodward has worked at the College of William and Mary, American Bar Foundation, New York Latino Research and Resources Network, New York State Department of Civil Service, and the University at Albany, State University of New York, where she received her doctorate in 2013. Her prior research includes publications on the implementation of school desegregation in Nashville-Davidson County, Tennessee, and bilingual education laws in New York. Currently, Woodward is working on projects related to the early interpretations of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the institutional capacity of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the importance of teaching pedagogy in higher education.

Acknowledgments

This volume grew out of the “The Rights Revolution Revisited” workshop held at The City College of New York in 2012. As part of the two-day workshop, Thomas F. Burke, Charles Epp, Sean Farhang, Michael McCann, Shep Melnick, Quinn Mulroy, and Sarah Staszak presented their ongoing work on legal mobilization and the private enforcement of civil rights. Sean Farhang also delivered the D’Agostino Lecture in Law and Public Policy, and Charles Epp presented the Boudin Lecture in Civil Liberties. I thank them for their participation and for the lively and productive discussion. We are also grateful to the Skadden, Arps Honors Program in Legal Studies, the Department of Political Science, and the D’Agostino/Greenberg Program for their generous support of the workshop. Many of the contributors gathered together regularly as this volume began to take shape. In 2013, Jeb Barnes, Thomas F. Burke, Lynda Dodd, Charles Epp, Sean Farhang, and Quinn Mulroy presented their scholarship on rights enforcement and retrenchment at the annual meeting of the Law and Society Association. David Freeman Engstrom joined the project in 2014, and Ming Hsu Chen, Paul Gardner, and Jennifer Woodward in 2015. In 2015, Paul Gardner chaired and presented on a panel on private enforcement with Jeb Barnes, Lynda Dodd, Sean Farhang, Shep Melnick, and Quinn Mulroy at the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association. Thanks to all of the contributors’ efforts at each stage, our dialogue was transformed into a book project about the institutional dynamics of the rights revolution. We would especially like to thank Michael McCann and Charles Epp for their incisive suggestions, and our editor Matthew Gallaway and the reviewers for Cambridge University Press for their insights and encouragement as we completed our chapters for this book.