

European Review of Economic History

Editorial policy

European Review of Economic History aims to publish significant and original research which offers new insights in European economic history. The objective is to further research, scholarship and understanding of economic structure, change and economic development in Europe since early modern times. Contributions will shed new light on existing debates, raise new or neglected topics and provide new perspectives from comparative research.

The review embraces all aspects of European economic history including: agriculture; demography; industrialisation; trade and commerce; banking and finance; macroeconomic history; local and regional history; labour markets; income, wealth and living standards.

1. Submissions

Submission of contributions to the Review is fully electronic through the Editorial Express e-submission system. The abstract (as a text file) and the manuscript's text body (anonymized, including all graphs and tables at the end, as a PDF) should be submitted separately.

Submission of a paper will be taken to imply that it is unpublished and is not being considered for publication elsewhere. Upon acceptance of a paper, the authors will be asked to assign copyright (on certain conditions) to Cambridge University Press.

Contributors are responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce any material in which they do not hold copyright and for ensuring that the appropriate acknowledgements are included in the manuscript.

2. Manuscript preparation

The recommended length for articles is 8,000-10,000 words. Contributions to notes and debates should be 4,000-5,000 words.

Three copies of the manuscript should be submitted on white A4 sized paper, printed on one side only, and double spaced throughout, including notes and a list of references. In the event of the manuscript being accepted for publication the author will be asked to submit the text on computer disk (Apple Macintosh or IBM compatible PC) as well as in hard copy, giving details of the wordprocessing software used (Microsoft Word or Word Perfect). However, the publisher reserves the right to typeset material by conventional means if an author's disk proves unsatisfactory.

The author's name, mailing address and the title of the manuscript should appear separately on the cover sheet. An abstract of 100-150 words should also be printed on a separate sheet. Tables and figures (including graphs) should be printed on separate sheets at the end of the manuscript and should each be numbered consecutively. Figures should be submitted in a form suitable for direct reproduction.

Manuscripts must be submitted in English although exceptions may be made in certain circumstances. Any non-English manuscript must be translated into English before final acceptance.

Authors who wish their contributions returned if not accepted for publication are asked to enclose return postage or international postage coupons.

3. Text Conventions

British spelling is preferred. Words or phrases in other languages except for proper names, or quotations or words in common usage should be in italics.

For quotations, single quotation marks should be used, with double quotation marks only used for quotations within quotations. Quotations of more than 50 words should be broken off from the text and indented without quotation marks.

Numbers up to ten should be spelled out, but arabic numbers should be used thereafter. Standard contractions should be used, e.g. m for million. Use the forms 26 November 1935, 1930s, and twentieth century (noun).

Citations and bibliographical references in the text and footnotes should follow the 'Harvard' or author-date system, e.g. (Persson, 1993, p. 105).

Footnotes should be kept to a minimum and, where necessary, kept as short as possible. They should be double spaced and should appear sequentially at the end of the text.

Acknowledgements should appear at the end of the manuscript following the footnotes. References should follow acknowledgements and should use the following style:

Persson, K. G. (1993). Was there a productivity gap between fourteenth-century Italy and England? Economic History Review 66, 105-14.

Zamagni, V. (1993). The Economic History of Italy, 1860-1990. Oxford: Clarendon Press

Where extensive sources have been used for data, these should appear in a separate section with full references. Source references should not be included in the list of references unless they are cited directly in the text.

4. Proofs

Typographical or factual errors only may be changed at proof stage. The publisher reserves the right to charge authors for correction of non-typographical errors.

5. Offprints

25 offprints of each article and review article will be supplied free to the first named author. Extra copies may be purchased from the publisher if ordered at proof stage.
