

Japanese Journal of Political Science

Manuscripts

The Editor welcomes the submission of materials for consideration as a main article of the Journal. The approximate length required for main articles is 7,000 to 10,000 words, including tables, figures, reference, appendices, and endnotes.

The Japanese journal of Political Science is a refereed journal which adopts double-blind reviewing system, and contributors should allow time for the process of refereeing to take place.

Your manuscript (MS-Word file) can be submitted electronically to the e-mail address below:

JJPS Editorial Office: jjpeditorial@cambridge.org

An abstract (no more than 250 words) together with a brief author profile (150 words or less) should accompany the submission. The author's name and affiliation must not appear on the main body of your manuscript, but only on a separate cover sheet.

Authors, particularly those whose first language is not English, may wish to have their English-language manuscripts checked by a native speaker before submission. This is optional, but may help to ensure that the academic content of the paper is fully understood by the editor and any reviewers. We list a number of third-party services specialising in language editing and / or translation, and suggest that authors contact as appropriate.

Please note that the use of any of these services is voluntary, and at the author's own expense. Use of these services does not guarantee that the manuscript will be accepted for publication, nor does it restrict the author to submitting to a Cambridge published journal.

The desired location of tables and figures is to be indicated in the text, but all tables and figures are to be placed on separate sheets at the end of the article, following the notes and references. Tables and figures can be submitted in a separate file.

When an article has been accepted for publication after the process of review and revise, the author should submit a final version of the article in a Word file (MS-Word 2003 or later) to the editorial office of the Japanese Journal of Political Science as an e-mail attachment.

Referencing : Harvard (author-year) system

Whenever you are quoting the exact words of another writer; closely summarising a passage from another writer; or using an idea or material which is directly based on the work of another writer, you must identify and acknowledge your source in a systematic style of referencing. We basically recommend the Harvard system of referencing.

There are two parts to the author-year system of referencing.

References (author and year of publication) are briefly cited within the text (called embedded or in-text referencing), and then all of the resources referred to in the body of the writing are given at the end of the manuscript in the reference list. References should give full bibliographical details in the alphabetical order. Each item should include: full name (surname and first name) of the author, date of publication in parenthesis, title of the source e.g. such as book and article in italics, place of publication and the publisher, and pages numbers if necessary.

Example of Citation and Reference

Example of Citation

For citation, use the surname of the author and the year of publication, basically.

If there are two authors, cite both. If there are more than two authors, cite only the first followed by 'et al.', which means 'and others'.

If an author has published more documents in the same year, distinguish between them by adding lower-case letters.

Example 1

Benedict Anderson, a political scientist at Cornell University, has gone so far as to say that the American academic writing is targeted at narrowly defined professional audience and its style is "boring" to other potential readers (Anderson, 2009a, 2009b).

Example 2

Just as Midland, Texas has brought up George W. Bush and Tommy Franks and thus shaped United States war policy in Iraq, Ann Arbor, Michigan has exemplified and thus arguably shaped quintessentially American political science. It is the trinity of robust academic professionalism, solid positivism and heavy methodological armory has been a trademark of American political science (Gunnell, 2004; Easton et al, 1995, Oren, 2003).

Example of Reference

Put them in alphabetical order.

Reference

Anderson, Benedict (2009) Yashigara wan no sotoe (Out of Coconut Palm Rice Bowl), Tokyo: NTT shuppan.

Banno, Junji (1995) The Establishment of the Japanese Constitutional System, London: Routledge.

Banno, Junji (1996) Kindai Nihon no kokka koso: 1871-1936 (The Structure of the State in Modern Japan, 1871-1936), Tokyo: Iwanami shoten.

Blondel, Jean and Takashi Inoguchi (2006) Political Culture in Asia and Europe, London: Routledge.

Cox, Michael, G. John Ikenberry and Takashi Inoguchi (2000) American Democracy Promotion, Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Easton, David et al. (1995) Regime and Discipline: Democracy and the Development of Political Science, Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press.

Fukuda, Arihiro (1998) Sovereignty at the Sword: Harrington, Hobbes, and Mixed Government in the English Civil Wars, NY: Oxford University Press.

Gunnell, John (2004) Imagining the American Polity: Political Science and the Discourse of Democracy, Pennsylvania State University Press.

Hoffmann, Stanley, (1987) [1977], 'An American Social Science: International Relations', reprinted as pp 3-24 in his (ed), Janus and Minerva: Essays in the Theory and Practice of International Politics, Boulder, CO: Westview Press.

Inoguchi, Takashi (1985) 'Inyou bunken ni tsuiteno Life-style Kasetu (A Life-Cycle Hypothesis on Citation Practice)', Toshokan no mado (Windows of the Library), Tokyo: University of Tokyo Library, 24:9.

Inoguchi, Takashi, ed. (1993-94) The East Asian States and Societies Library 6 volumes, Tokyo: University of Tokyo Press.

Inoguchi, Takashi (1995) "Democracy and the Development of Political Science in Japan," in David Easton et al, eds., Regime and Discipline, Ann Arbor, Michigan: University of Michigan Press, pp269-293.

Kabashima, Ikuo (2007) "Changing Media, Changing Politics," special issue of the Japanese Journal of Political Science, Vol. 8, Pt 1 (April).

Endnotes

Endnotes and Appendix can be used as sparingly as possible where needed to expand or enforce your article. In this case, endnotes need to be given consecutive numbers through the whole manuscript.

Copyedit and Proof-check

After your manuscript is accepted, it will be copyedited and the first proof data (PDF) should be sent to the contributors. They are to be read and corrected by contributors. The contributors return the checked and corrected proofs, by airmail or e-mail where appropriate, within seven days of receiving them. Authors will receive a PDF offprint of their article. Printed article may be purchased from the publisher if ordered at first proof stage.

Copying

The journal is registered with the Copyright Clearance Center, 222 Rosewood Drive, Danvers, MA 01923, USA. Organisations in the USA who are also registered with the CCC may therefore copy material (beyond the limits permitted by sections 107 and 108 of the US copyright law) subject to payment to CCC of the per-copy fee of $12.50. This consent does not extend to multiple copying for promotional or commercial purposes. Code 1468-1099/01 $12.50. Organisations authorised by the Copyright Licensing Agency may also copy material subject to the usual conditions. ISI Tar Service, 3501 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104, USA, is authorized to supply single copies of separate articles for private use only. For all other use, permission should be sought from Cambridge UK or the American Branch of Cambridge University Press.

Open Access Policies

Please visit journals.cambridge.org/openaccess for information on our open access policies, compliance with major funding bodies, and guidelines on depositing your manuscript in an institutional repository.