By the end of the twentieth century some nine million people of South Asian descent had left India, Bangladesh or Pakistan and settled in different parts of the world, forming a diverse modern diaspora. This is the story of how they constructed new communities overseas and their often painful experiences.

- A compact and accessibly composed introduction to the South Asian diaspora from the nineteenth century to the present
- Relating the first-hand experiences of those living abroad in often harsh and unwelcoming environments
- By a well-known and experienced scholar who has written extensively on South Asia, its peoples and politics

China’s Republic
Diana Lary
University of British Columbia, Vancouver

A concise and accessible history of the Chinese Republic, which was established in 1912 at the end of the Chinese Empire and ended in 1949 when mainland China fell to the Communists. It marked the beginning of a period of intense change as China struggled towards modernisation.

- The first book in over a decade to explore the history of China’s Republic
- Explores major themes such as nationalism, cosmopolitanism, the demise of warlordism and China’s relationship with her neighbours
- Extra features include biographies of key figures, quotations and anecdotes which illustrate the period

‘With Professor Lary’s well-written text, Republican China has finally been given the treatment it deserves. As a result, Lary succeeds in bringing back to life for the student and specialist alike a balanced view of this complex era that does not overemphasize the rise of the Communists and collapse of the Guomindang.’

Stephen R. Mackinnon
Professor of History, Arizona State University
