Africa since 1940
The Past of the Present
Frederick Cooper, New York University

Frederick Cooper’s latest book on the history of African decolonization and independence deals with the historical process out of which Africa’s current position in the world has emerged, bridges the divide between colonial and post-colonial history, and explains how political independence did and did not affect how men and women, peasants and workers, religious and local leaders sought to refashion the way they lived, worked, and interacted with each other.

Contents

New Approaches to African History
October 2002   228 x 152 mm   230pp   18 line diagrams   17 half-tones   2 tables   5 maps
0 521 77241 9 Hardback £40.00
0 521 77600 7 Paperback £14.99

For information on other titles in this series, please consult our website at: www.cambridge.org/series
Muslim Societies in African History

David Robinson, Michigan State University

This book examines a series of processes (Islamization, Arabization, Africanization) and case studies from the Muslim societies of Africa over the last millennium. In contrast to traditions which suggest that Islam did not take root in Africa, Robinson shows the complex struggles of Muslims throughout the continent: in Morocco and in the Hausaland region of Nigeria, in the societies of Ashanti (Ghana) and Buganda (Uganda), and in the ostensibly Christian state of Ethiopia. He concludes with chapters on the Mahdi and Khalifa of the Sudan and the Murid Sufi movement.

Contents

New Approaches to African History

• Ideal for undergraduate courses such as ‘Introductions to African history’, ‘African Religions’, and courses on Islam.