Culture in Australia Policies, Publics and Programs

Culture in Australia offers an incisive and up-to-date examination of the forces that are reshaping Australian cultural priorities, policies and practices at the start of the twenty-first century. Drawing on the work of some of Australia's leading cultural analysts, its concerns range broadly across the cultural sector encompassing art and heritage institutions, publishing, broadcasting, sport, tourism, museums, the music industry, film and youth cultures. These are placed in the context of the major national and international forces that are redrawing the cultural landscape in contemporary Australia. Engagingly and accessibly written, Culture in Australia offers a challenging introduction to current debates and dialogues focused on the need to imagine new cultural futures for an increasingly diverse and mobile people.

Tony Bennett is Professor of Sociology at the Open University and was previously Professor of Cultural Studies and Director of the Australian Key Centre for Cultural and Media Policy at Griffith University, Brisbane. His previous books include (with Michael Emmison and John Frow) Accounting for Tastes: Australian Everyday Cultures (Cambridge University Press, 1999); Culture: A Reformer's Science (1998); The Birth of the Museum: History, Theory, Politics (1995); and Outside Literature (1991). He has published extensively in various journals including Critical Inquiry, Economy and Society, Cultural Studies, and New Formations.

David Carter is Director of the Australian Studies Centre at the University of Queensland and President of the International Australian Studies Association. His publications include A Career in Writing: Judah Waten and the Cultural Politics of a Literary Career (1997), Outside the Book: Contemporary Essays on Literary Periodicals (1991) and (with Wayne Hudson) The Republicanism Debate (1993).

Acknowledgements

The editors wish to thank, first, the staff of the Australian Key Centre for Cultural and Media Policy for their support in helping to organise the Reshaping Australian Cultural Institutions workshop from which this book is derived. Special thanks here go to Karen Perkins, Bev Jeppesen and Glenda Donovan at Griffith University.

The success of the workshop was also due to the invaluable work of Mary Hapel of the Research School of Social Sciences at the Australian National University. We are also grateful to Professors Geoffrey Brennan and Frank Castles of the Research School of Social Sciences and joint coordinators of the Reshaping Australian Institutions program for supporting the project from the outset. We are especially grateful to all those who participated in the workshop in person or through written contributions but who are not represented in this book: Ann Curthoys, Bill Green, Sneja Gunew, Ghassan Hage, Barry Hindess, Lesley Johnson, Alison Lee, Ian McCalman, Julie Marcus and Jill Matthews.

Phillipa McGuinness of Cambridge University Press was an early enthusiast for the project and her support was later continued by Peter Debus.

We would also like to thank Molly Freeman of the Sociology Discipline and Sophie Taysom of the Pavis Centre for Social and Cultural Research, The Open University, and Janice Mitchell, School of Film, Media and Cultural Studies, Griffith University, for their help in finalising the typescript. The School of Humanities, Griffith University, has supplied generous institutional support.

Contributors

Tony Bennett is Professor of Sociology at the Open University, having previously served as Professor of Cultural Studies at Griffith University where he was also the Director of the Australian Key Centre for Cultural and Media Policy. His recent publications include The Birth of the Museum (1995), Culture: A Reformer's Science (1998) and (with Michael Emmison and John Frow) Accounting for Tastes: Australian Everyday Cultures (1999). He is a Fellow of the Australian Academy of the Humanities.

David Carter is an Associate Professor in the School of English, Media Studies and Art History at the University of Queensland where he is also Director of the Australian Studies Centre. He previously taught Australian studies, literature and cultural studies in the School of Humanities at Griffith University. His publications include A Career in Writing: Judah Waten and the Cultural Politics of a Literary Career (1997) which was awarded the Walter McCrae Russell prize for literary scholarship, and (with Wayne Hudson) The Republicanism Debate (1993).

Jennifer Craik is Associate Professor in the School of Film, Media and Cultural Studies, and a researcher in the Australian Key Centre for Cultural and Media Policy at Griffith University. Her publications include The Face of Fashion: Cultural Studies in Fashion (1994), Resorting to Tourism: Cultural Policies for Tourism Development in Australia (1990) and Public Voices, Private Interests: Australia's Media Policy (1995, co-edited with J.J. Bailey and A. Moran).

Michael Emmison is Associate Professor in the School of Social Sciences at the University of Queensland. He is co-editor of Class Analysis in Contemporary Australia (1991), and the co-author of Accounting for Tastes: Australian Everyday Cultures (1999) and of Researching the Visual (2000).

Kay Ferres is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Humanities at Griffith University. Her teaching and research interests are located in the fields of gender studies, literature and history. These interests converge in two current projects: an account of the way civics and citizenship education has been articulated to the project of revitalising civil society and a biographical study of Rosa Campbell Praed. Her publications include An Articulate Country: Reinventing Australian Citizenship (2001; with Denise Meredyth), Deciphering Culture: Ordinary Curiosities and Subjective Narratives (2000; with Jane Crisp and Gillian Swanson), Christopher Isherwood: A World in Evening (1994) and the edited anthology, A Time to Write (1993).

John Frow is Regius Professor of Rhetoric and English Literature at the University of Edinburgh, and previously served as the Darnell Professor of English at the University of Queensland. His most recent books are Time and Commodity Culture (1997) and (with Tony Bennett and Michael Emmison) Accounting for Tastes: Australian Everyday Cultures (1999). He is a Fellow of the Australian Academy of the Humanities.

Gay Hawkins is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Media and Communications at the University of New South Wales in Sydney. In 1993 she published From Nimbin to Mardi Gras: Constructing Community Arts, an analysis of the impacts of the invocation of 'community' in arts policy. More recently she has been working on the relation between quality and difference in public service broadcasting and on theories of value. Publications on these issues include her essay 'Public service broadcasting in Australia: value and difference' in A. Calabrese and J. Burgelman (eds) Communication, Citizenship & Social Policy (1999).

Chris Healy is a Senior Lecturer in Cultural Studies at the University of Melbourne. He is the editor of The Lifeblood of Footscray (1986) and co-editor of Beasts of Suburbia (1994). His book, From the Ruins of Colonialism: History as Social Memory (1997) was shortlisted for the 1998 Gleebooks Prize in the NSW Premier's Literary Awards.

James Jupp is Director of the Centre for Immigration and Multicultural Studies at the Australian National University. He was general editor of the encyclopedia The Australian People (1988) and is preparing a second edition for the centenary of federation. Dr Jupp has published extensively on immigration and multiculturalism. His latest book, Immigration, was published in 1998.

Geoffrey Lawrence is Foundation Professor of Sociology and Director of the Institute for Sustainable Regional Development at Central Queensland University, Australia. Apart from having a strong interest in sports sociology, he has conducted Australian-based studies into aspects of rural social disadvantage, agro-biotechnologies and structural change in farming. With Jim McKay, Toby Miller and David Rowe, he is the author of Globalization and Sport: Playing the World (2001). Forthcoming books include A Future for Regional Australia: Escaping Global Misfortune (Cambridge University Press, 2001) and Environment, Society and Natural Resource Management (Edward Elgar, 2001).
