I should like to thank Professor Richard Cobb for his warm encouragement and advice at every stage in the writing of the present book. My interest in the subject was first kindled in the scholarly and convivial atmosphere of his Oxford seminar; he supervised the D. Phil. thesis on which the work is based; and his approach to France and to French history remain an inspiration.

There are other debts I have incurred which it is my pleasant task to record. In Montpellier, the staff of the Departmental Archives of the Hérault – notably M. J. Gigot, Mlle D. Neirenck and Mme A. Sahraoui – took great pains to facilitate my research on documents formerly unclassified or inaccessible. The administrators of the city's Protestant church and its charity pawnshop, the Prêt Gratuit, kindly allowed me to consult their archives. On this side of the Channel, Professor Olwen Hufton, Dr Colin Lucas, Dr Gwynne Lewis and Dr Alan Forrest all helped at various key stages. The Ernest Cassel Educational Trust and the Universities of Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Exeter granted me research funds to enable me to undertake visits to Montpellier archives. Vicky Annis, Judith Saywell, Janet Stiling and Hilary Tolley patiently and painstakingly undertook the typing and retyping involved in the composition of the present work. Sean Goddard and Mike Rouillard drew some of the maps and advised in the preparation of others. My parents, Joyce and Lawrence Jones, and my parents-in-law, Gertrude and Frederick Holdaway, have given moral and financial support with unstinting generosity. Finally, I wish to record my especial thanks to my wife, Nicole Jones, who has cheerfully lived with the research project behind this book from its very inception. The end product can only be dedicated to her.
