

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-02870-7 - Environment and Ethnicity in India, 1200-1991

Sumit Guha

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

'Rama, Sita and Lukshmana in the forest'	frontispiece
List of maps	x
List of tables	x
Acknowledgements	xi–xiii
Glossary	xiv
List of abbreviations	xv
Introduction	1
1 From the archaeology of mind to the archaeology of matter	10
Static societies, changeless races	10
Geology, biology and society in the nineteenth century	11
Indigenous prejudice and colonial knowledge	15
Social segments or living fossils?	21
A historical questioning of the archaeological record	22
2 Subsistence and predation at the margins of cultivation	30
Introduction	30
Nature, culture and landscape in Peninsular India	30
Opportunities and communities	40
The political economy of community interaction	43
Forest wanderers, graziers and traders	46
Ecological war – clearing the forest	49
Subordinate communities and dominant communities	52
'Beda, Berad, Bedar, Mushtigir': allegiances, professions, identities	55
3 State formation in the highland forests 1350–1800	62
Introduction: strategic location and regional power	62
Infirm glory: the Baglan Rajas from independent chiefs to impotent pensioners	64
Local conflicts and wider alliances	70
The Koli kingdoms between Marathas and Mughals	74
Forest states – strategies and dangers	80
4 The peoples of the Sahyadri under Marathas and British	83
Introduction	83

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-02870-7 - Environment and Ethnicity in India, 1200-1991

Sumit Guha

Table of Contents

More information

viii	Contents
	From Mavle to Rajput to Koli: politics and identity in the Sahyadri Ranges	85
	Struggles for dominance: Clearance, acculturation and settlement in the Sahyadri	88
	The transition to colonial rule	96
	Umaji Raje Mukkam Dongar	99
	Political competition to social banditry	102
	Subordinate communities of the Sahyadri	105
5	The central Indian forest from Mughal suzerainty to British control	108
	Part I Bhilwada	108
	Introduction	108
	The Bhils at the entry of Maratha power	109
	Unstable regimes of accommodation and conflict	112
	War and politics in time of crisis – the 1803 famine and after	116
	Conclusion to Part I	121
	Part II Gondwana	122
	Introduction – The rise of the Gond kingdoms	122
	Refounding the agrarian order	125
	Gondwana in the time of troubles	126
	General conclusion	129
6	The central Indian forest under early British rule	130
	Introduction	130
	Early strategies of the colonial government	130
	Amalgamating the segments: politics and state-formation	133
	Shaping a new environment	136
	The expulsion of the mercenaries and the disarticulation of the forest polities	138
	Vestigial authority – the Dangs 1850–1991	142
	The Akhrani plateau: from regional fulcrum to sylvan backwater 1750–1970	145
7	Identities and aspiration – not noble savage but savage noble	150
	Introduction	150
	Microprocesses of self-promotion	151
	Political lordship and agrarian settlement	153
	Aspirations and identities in Gondwana	155
	From Kings of the Forest to Lords of the Land	161
	Conclusions	163
8	The high colonial period and after – new patterns of authority and power	164
	Introduction	164
	Conservation and conservatism from imperial to independent India	164
	The new Kings of the Forest	169
	Agrarianisation, sedentarisation and bondage	172
9	From sanctuaries to safeguards: policies and politics in twentieth-century India	182
	Protective custody for infant races	182
	‘Uplift’ and sedentarisation	185

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-02870-7 - Environment and Ethnicity in India, 1200-1991

Sumit Guha

Table of Contents

More information

Contents	ix
A balance-sheet: land gain and land loss in tribal Maharashtra	187
Economic structures, electoral politics and tribal communities	194
Conclusions	198
Conclusion	199
Afterword	202
Bibliography	204
Index	216