

Contents

List of contributors	page vii
1 Trajectories and turning points over the life course: concepts and themes Blair Wheaton &amp; Ian H. Gotlib	1
I Trajectories: long-term effects of adverse experience
2 Childhood adversity and adult psychopathology Ronald C. Kessler, Jacquelyn Gillis-Light, William J. Magee, Kenneth S. Kendler, &amp; Lindon J. Eaves	29
3 The impact of twenty childhood and adult traumatic stressors on the risk of psychiatric disorder Blair Wheaton, Patricia Roszell, &amp; Kimberlee Hall	50
4 Intergenerational sanction sequences and trajectories of street-crime amplification John Hagan &amp; Bill McCarthy	73
5 School-leavers' self-esteem and unemployment: turning point or a station on a trajectory? David Dooley &amp; JoAnn Prause	91
6 Intergenerational consequences of social stressors: effects of occupational and family conditions on young mothers and their children Elizabeth G. Menaghan	114
7 Women's roles and resilience: trajectories of advantage or turning points? Phyllis Moen	133
II Turning points: changes in life trajectories
8 Becoming unsupervised: children's transitions from adult-care to self-care in the afterschool hours Deborah Belle, Sara Norell, &amp; Anthony Lewis	159

vi		Contents
9	Children whose parents divorce: life trajectories and turning points Donald Wertlieb	179
10	Life after high school: development, stress, and well-being Susan Gore, Robert Aseltine, Jr., Mary Ellen Colten, &amp; Bin Lin	197
11	Turning points in midlife Elaine Wethington, Hope Cooper, &amp; Carolyn S. Holmes	215
12	Adaptation to retirement Robert S. Weiss	232
III New methods for the study of the life course
13	Construction and use of the life history calendar: reliability and validity of recall data Nan Lin, Walter M. Ensel, &amp; Wan-foon Gina Lai	249
14	Using discrete-time survival analysis to study event occurrence across the life course John B. Willett &amp; Judith D. Singer	273
	Index	295