The Safavid empire in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries

Acknowledgements

I acknowledge with thanks receipt of a grant from the Canada Council which enabled me to go to Iran in 1974 to carry out field research for this book. I would like also to record my debt of gratitude to Shojaeddin Shafa for the way in which he facilitated my work in Iran.

My special thanks are due to my wife, who did much of the work of selecting and obtaining prints of the illustrations; to my daughter-in-law Teresa, who drew the plan for the map; to my colleague Lisa V. Golombek, who selected a number of items from the Royal Ontario Museum collection for inclusion among the illustrations; to my colleague Glyn M. Meredith-Owens; and to Renata Holod, Judith Lerner, The Revd D. G. Montanari, Michael Rogers, Yvette Sauvan, Norah Titley, Betty Tyers, Anthony Welch, Stuart Cary Welch and Donald Wilber, for their efforts to track down portraits of elusive shahs and other illustrations. In addition, I wish to thank Anthony Welch for sending me a copy of his excellent work, Shāh 'Abbas and the Arts of Isfahan, and R. W. Ferrier and Bert Fragner for making some of their unpublished work available to me; unfortunately Dr Fragner's material arrived too late to be incorporated in my chapter on the Safavid economy.

Finally, my sincere thanks are due to Robert Seal, who first encouraged me to write this book; to the staff of Cambridge University Press, especially Andrew Brown for his unfailing help and valuable advice at all stages of the book's production; and to Roloff Beny, for graciously allowing me to use his outstanding photograph of the Chihil Sutūn fresco for the book jacket.

The title of Chapter 1 was suggested by a phrase in Vladimir Minorsky's translation of Tadhkirat al-Mulūk.
