Contents

Acknowledgments

INTRODUCTION

Notes

1. THE PROBLEM OF NATURAL AGENCY

I. A Theory in Search of Its Problem

The standard answer: Accounting for the action/behavior distinction 10
Locating agency in context: Our ethical perspective
11
What is philosophically puzzling about agency? The natural perspective on action 12
Skepticism about natural agency: A first statement
14
Is skepticism about action out of date?
18

II. Commitments of the Ethical Perspective

What kind of freedom of action does moral responsibility entail?
19
Freedom as satisfaction of the “could have done otherwise” condition 20
The Frankfurt counterexamples
21
Moral luck and the condition of control
22
The condition of control as a CDO condition
23
Actions as exercises of control
25

III. Commitments of the Natural Perspective

The “containment of indeterminism” response
26
Restating the problem of natural agency as independent of determinism
27
The “dilemma” formulation of the problem of natural agency
28
A radical separation of the problem of natural agency from the question of determinism 29
The “clash of explanation-types” formulation
30
Assessment of the clash of explanation-types formulation
31

\[ v \]
IV. The Core of the Problem of Action – and a Plausible Solution

The agent-causation formulation of the problem of natural agency
Further advantages to the agent-causation formulation
The causal theory of action as a solution to the problem of natural agency

NOTES

THE VALUE OF A CAUSAL THEORY OF ACTION

I. A Traditional Approach to the Problem of Natural Agency

II. Is Action Possible under Determinism?

The consequence argument for incompatibilism
Questioning the main modal principle: Slote’s implicit appeal to CTA
Additional note: Earlier criticisms of the consequence argument
The place of CTA in compatibilist responses to the consequence argument
A CTA sufficient to defeat the consequence argument will need to be deterministic
The case against a specifically deterministic causal theory of action
Should incompatibilists seek to reject CTA altogether?

III. Is Action Possible under Indeterminism?

Agent-causation
Is a probabilistic causal theory of action possible?

IV. A Comparison with Dennett’s Elbow Room

Dennett’s negative case for reconciliatory naturalism
Reconstructing the natural evolution of agency: Its independence of the metaphysical problem
Dennett’s epistemologizing of the free will problem
Does intentional system theory alone resolve the problem of natural agency?

V. The Conditional Analysis Argument

Problems for the conditional analysis argument

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lehrer’s rejection of conditional analyses</td>
<td>85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Revising the CAA strategy</td>
<td>88</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The impotence of CAA without CTA</td>
<td>88</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NOTES</td>
<td>90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. DEVELOPING A CAUSAL THEORY OF ACTION</td>
<td>95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I. Causal Analyses of Action</td>
<td>95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A first approach to a CTA analysis</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Is a CTA analysis in terms of reasons even possible?</td>
<td>99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How to make a positive case for a reason-based CTA analysis</td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A first hypothesis for a CTA analysis</td>
<td>104</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Intentional action and action in general</td>
<td>106</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>II. The Challenge of Akrasia</td>
<td>107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Characterizing weak-willed action</td>
<td>108</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Are weak-willed actions a real possibility?</td>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How akrasia poses a problem for a CTA analysis</td>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How to specify the rationality condition for a CTA analysis</td>
<td>112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Davidson’s notion of an unconditional practical judgment</td>
<td>113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Unconditional practical judgments construed as intentions</td>
<td>114</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An independent argument for admitting intentions</td>
<td>117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The possibility of final stage akrasia</td>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Akrasia as a problem for CTA’s causal condition</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NOTES</td>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. THE CHALLENGE OF CAUSAL DEVIANCE</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Causally deviant counterexamples to CTA-H</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How deviant cases challenge CTA</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Match with the action-plan as necessary for nondeviant action</td>
<td>128</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Making precise the condition of match with the action-plan</td>
<td>129</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The problem of basic deviance</td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Excluding basic deviance: The causal chain must constitute practical reasoning</td>
<td>134</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Excluding basic deviance: Causation by virtually concurrent intentions</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Excluding basic deviance: The causal immediacy strategy</td>
<td>138</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Excluding basic deviance: Volitions</td>
<td>140</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May the exclusion of basic deviance be left to future empirical enquiry?</td>
<td>142</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NOTES</td>
<td>145</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
5. COPING WITH BASIC DEVIANCE 148

I. The Promise of the Sensitivity Strategy 148
   Counterfactual and differential explanation versions of the sensitivity condition 150

II. Alternative Versions of the Sensitivity Strategy 151
   The Frankfurt examples again 151
   The reverse behavioral censor 153
   A problem for the differential explanation version? 153
   A teleological construal of the sensitivity condition 154

III. Assessing the Sensitivity Strategy 155
   Prosthetic aids to action 155
   Heteromesial causal chains 156
   Should a sensitivity CTA analysis also exclude heteromesy? 157
   Heterogeneity among the heteromesial cases 158
   Considerations about responsibility as reinforcing the deviance of preemptively heteromesial cases 160
   Implications of preemptively heteromesial cases for a CTA analysis 162
   A consilience of grounds for rejecting a sensitivity CTA analysis 165

IV. Sensitive and Sustained Causation 167
   Sustained causation 167
   Servosystems and feedback loops 168
   Preemptive heteromesy again 169
   Appeal to the detailed architecture of feedback loops 170
   The final breakthrough? 171

NOTES 172

6. LIMITS FOR THE CAUSAL THEORY OF ACTION 176

I. Dealing with the Agent-Causationist Syndrome 176
   The story so far 176
   In what sense is basic action primitive? 177
   Other aspects of the agent-causationist syndrome 180

II. The Place of the Causal Theory of Action in the Wider Project of Reconciliatory Naturalism 184
   A fundamental problem ignored? 184
Table of Contents

CTA-BI solves the problem of natural agency only given natural realism about intentional states 187

How much of a problem of natural moral autonomy remains once CTA resolves the problem of natural agency? 190

CTA and the vindication of moral responsibility 191

NOTES 194

Bibliography 197

Index 203