Acknowledgements

I wish to thank the owners and trustees of copyright material for access to private papers, in particular the Trustees of the Fitzwilliam Estates and the Director of Sheffield City Libraries, Mr C. B. Jewson, Messrs Josiah Wedgwood and Sons Limited, Mr S. C. Whitbread, Mr C. E. Wrangham and Mr Charles Wyvill.

The staffs of many libraries and record repositories – notably the Australian National University Library, the Bedford Record Office, the British Library, the British Library of Political and Economic Science, the Carlisle Library, the Central Library, Sheffield, the Department of Palaeography and Diplomatic, University of Durham, Dr Williams' Library, the Liverpool Record Office, the National Library of Australia, the Norfolk Record Office, the North Yorkshire Record Office, the University of Canterbury Library, University College Library, London, the University of Keele Library, the University of Liverpool Library and the University of London Library – gave help and advice for which I am most grateful.

Most of the work was carried out during the tenure first of a Nuffield Travelling Fellowship and then of a research fellowship at the Research School of Social Sciences, Australian National University. I wish to thank the Nuffield Foundation and the ANU for financial assistance and for giving me the opportunity of work and travel overseas. The University of Canterbury generously allowed me two periods of extended leave so that I could take up these awards.

Many individuals have had a hand in the making of this book, and I cannot possibly name them all. But I should like to mention the help given by Dr J. R. Dinwiddy, who directed me to a number of sources, and by Professor Oliver MacDonagh and Dr F. B. Smith, both of whom commented on an early draft of the manuscript. Pam, my wife, has been a tower of strength throughout. I dedicate the book to my children in the hope that the experience of war is never theirs.
