ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I should like to acknowledge the kindness of various owners of private manuscripts who have put them at my disposal: the late C. G. des Graz who inherited the Ludlow papers and left them in turn to the Cambridge University Library; Dr Sophie Brentano for permission to quote from Ludlow's letters to her father; Mr O. Westergaard for permission to quote from Ludlow's letters to his father, which are now in the Ludlow papers in the Cambridge University Library.

I am indebted to the institutions which have allowed me to use material: The British Museum; the Bishopsgate Institute; the Brotherton Library, Leeds University; the Society of Genealogists.

I should like to acknowledge the help especially of Mr Ian Catanach of Wellington, New Zealand, who wrote a remarkably interesting thesis on Ludlow, from which I have quoted extensively; Professor Asa Briggs, who read the script and made many suggestions; Professor Cecil Lang, Dr W. H. McCready, Dr Walter Houghton, Professor R. B. Martin, Dr F. C. Harrison, Dr E. W. Ward, Dr Royden Harrison and Miss Janet Blackman for directing me to Ludlow material; Miss M. Forbes, Miss M. Unwin, Mr Stephen Hilhouse, Canon Tissington Tatlow, and Canon Guy Rogers for personal accounts of him.

I should like also to thank my mother, Mrs C. F. G. Masterman, who really discovered the Ludlow papers; my wife, for reading the script; and Miss Magee, Mrs Robinson and Mrs Mason, who did the typing.

Finally I should like to acknowledge the assistance of the Council of Management of the Marc Fitch Fund who have made a grant towards the cost of publication.
