CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN EARLY MODERN HISTORY

Edited by J. H. Elliott and H. G. Koenigsberger

The idea of an 'early modern' period of European history from the fifteenth to the late eighteenth century is now widely accepted among historians. The purpose of the Cambridge Studies in Early Modern History is to publish monographs and studies which will illuminate the character of the period as a whole, and in particular focus attention on a dominant theme within it, the interplay of continuity and change as they are represented by the continuity of medieval ideas, political and social organization, and by the impact of new ideas, new methods and new demands on the traditional structures.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people have generously helped me in preparing this study. My thanks to the librarians and archivists of the Bibliothèque royale and the Archives générale du royaume in Brussels, the municipal library of Bruges, the municipal archives of Antwerp and Valenciennes, the British Museum and Guild Hall libraries in London, and the Bodleian Library at Oxford. Special thanks to the staff of the Faculty of Protestant Theology in Brussels for permission to examine their valuable library in the most congenial surroundings. The original research for this study was made possible by a Cornell University graduate fellowship, 1970–1971. The Rutgers University Research Council provided welcome financial assistance during the summers of 1974 and 1976. I am grateful to the editors of Garland Press for permission to quote from the work of Keith Moxey, Pieter Aertsen, Joachim Beuckelaer and the Rise of Secular Painting in the Context of the Reformation.

Thanks to teachers, colleagues and friends who encouraged my work. I am grateful to Elizabeth Gleason for introducing me to the study of the Reformation, and to Clive Holmes, David Lagomarsino, Herbert Rowen, Jacob Smit and Donald Weinstein, who read the manuscript in various stages. Emile Lousse, Jan Craeybeckx and Emile Braekman were hospitable and patient in introducing me to research facilities in Brussels. I am grateful to Marcel Backhouse, Alistair Duke, David Lagomarsino and Keith Moxey for sharing unpublished material on the Troubles of 1566, and to Jean Meyhoffer for graciously allowing me to examine his private notes on Protestant ministers in the Netherlands. Special thanks to my editor, Professor John Elliott, for his constructive criticism of the manuscript, and to my thesis adviser, Helmut Koenigsberger. Professor Koenigsberger's enthusiasm and broad intelligence were – and are – an invaluable example for a young historian; I am grateful for his guidance during the early stages of the project and for his continued encouragement of my efforts to transform my Ph.D. thesis into a more coherent form. Finally, my thanks to David Crew, who as colleague, friend and husband helped me, more than anyone else, to do my best.
