

Cambridge University Press
 978-0-521-09118-3 - The Bible To-day
 C. H. Dodd
 Table of Contents
More information

CONTENTS

PREFACE	page ix
CHAPTER I. THE BIBLE: WHAT IT IS	I
The sacred book of the Christian religion—A collection of ancient writings diverse in form and subject—The history of a continuous community: Hebrew clan, Israelite nation, Jewish 'dispersion', catholic Church—The Church puts forth the Bible as its 'canon'—The two 'testaments' ('covenants')—The New Testament and the Church—The Old Testament and its 'fulfilment'—History and revelation.
CHAPTER II. THE APPROACH TO THE BIBLE	15
The Bible in the early Church—canonical authority—freedom of criticism and interpretation—the allegorical method—The mediaeval schema —The Reformation and the right of private judgement—The post-Reformation situation—Return of biblical criticism—'Liberal' criticism, its value and limitations—'Post-liberal' criticism—Value of critical method for interpretation.
CHAPTER III. THE OLD TESTAMENT	33
Chronology of Old Testament writings—Cardinal position of the prophets—History of the prophetic period—The classical prophets—The prophetic interpretation of history and its sources in religious experience—Earlier history of Israel as interpreted by the prophets: the Exodus and the call of Abraham—The post-exilic period: codification of the Law, Psalms, 'Wisdom' literature, Apocalypses—Inconclusiveness of the Old Testament.
CHAPTER IV. THE NEW TESTAMENT	65
Emergence of the Christian Church—Chronology of New Testament writings—The 'New Covenant' and the Church—Unity of the New Testament—The apostolic 'Proclamation', its form and content—The 'New Commandment'—nature and contents of the Christian Law—The teaching of Jesus and its transmission—The story of Jesus in its historical setting.

Cambridge University Press
 978-0-521-09118-3 - The Bible To-day
 C. H. Dodd
 Table of Contents
More information

CONTENTS

CHAPTER V. HISTORY AS REVELATION page 98

'Progressive revelation'—The nature of History: occurrence + meaning—The meaning derived from an encounter with God—Validity of the prophetic experience of God—and of the apostolic experience of God in Christ—The Word of God—The 'particularity' of revelation—The Word made flesh—The supra-historical setting of the biblical history—First and Last Things—Conclusion: first principles of a biblical Weltanschauung.

CHAPTER VI. THE BIBLE AND THE HISTORICAL
PROBLEM OF OUR TIME 122

The challenge of the 'ideologies'—The need for an understanding of history—The possible 'transfiguration' of a situation—Biblical principles for the understanding of history—The pattern of history under the Word of God, traced in our situation—Judgement and renewal—The response: obedience to God in our situation—Where history is made—The rôle of the Church.

CHAPTER VII. HISTORY AND THE INDIVIDUAL 144

The problem of an historical revelation—Transition from history to experience—Individual and community in early Hebrew literature—in the Psalms—in the New Testament—The story of 'Everyman'—The Church, historical and contemporary—Mediation of history to the individual through Gospel and Sacrament.

INDEX OF REFERENCES 165