GENERAL EDITORS' PREFACE

The aim of this series is to provide the text of the New English Bible closely linked to a commentary in which the results of modern scholarship are made available to the general reader. Teachers and young people preparing for such examinations as the General Certificate of Education at Ordinary or Advanced Level in Britain and similar qualifications elsewhere have been especially kept in mind. The commentators have been asked to assume no specialized theological knowledge, and no knowledge of Greek and Hebrew. Bare references to other literature and multiple references to other parts of the Bible have been avoided. Actual quotations have been given as often as possible.

Within these quite severe limits each commentator will attempt to set out the main findings of recent New Testament scholarship, and to describe the historical background to the text. The main theological content of the New Testament will also be critically discussed.

Much attention has been given to the form of the volumes. The aim is to produce books each of which will be read consecutively from first to last page. The introductory material leads naturally into the text, which itself leads into the alternating sections of commentary.

The series is prefaced by a volume—Understanding the New Testament—which outlines the larger historical background, says something about the growth and transmission

EDITOR'S PREFACE

I wish to thank the General Editors for their exceedingly helpful comments during the preparation of this commentary, my wife for typing the manuscripts and assisting in the correction of the proofs, and the Cambridge University Press for their usual excellent work. Any success I may have achieved in clarifying Paul's thought comes from years of practice in attempting to explain Scripture to the congregations of Caledon and Minterburn when I was their minister.
