

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More information

v

CONTENTS.

BOOK II.

CHAPTER IV.

OWNERSHIP AND POSSESSION, pp. 1—183.

§ 1. Rights in land, pp. 2—29.

Distinction between movables and immovables, 2. Is land owned? 2. Ownership and lordship, 3. Ownership and feudal theory, 4.

Tenancy in fee and life tenancy, 6. The tenant in fee, 7. The life tenant, 7. Position of the life tenant, 8. Tenant for life and the law of waste, 9. Tenant for life and public law, 9. Seisin of tenant for life, 9. Tenants for life in litigation, 10.

The doctrine of estates, 10. The estate and the forma doni, 11. The power of the gift, 12. The form of the gift a law for the land, 13. The gift to a man and his heirs, 13. Duration of a fee, 14. Limited gifts, 15. The maritagium, 15. Gift to a man and the heirs of his body, 16. The conditional fee, 17. History of the conditional fee, 18. Statutory protection of conditional gifts, 19.

Settlements in cent. xiii., 20. Joint tenancies, 20. Reversion and remainder, 21. Remainders after life estates, 22. Reversion and escheat, 22. Remainders after conditional fees, 23.

Gifts upon condition, 25. The form of the gift and testamentary power, 26. Influence of the forma doni, 27.

Note on the conditional fee, 28.

§ 2. Seisin, pp. 29—80.

Seisin, 29. Seisin and possession, 29. Sitting on land, 30. Technicalities of seisin, 31. Seisin and remedies, 31. Seisin of chattels, 32. Contrast between seisin and proprietary rights, 33. Seisin and enjoyment, 34.

Who is seised? 34. Case of tenant in villeinage, 35. Case of termor, 36. Case of guardian, 37. Case of tenant for life, 38. Case of the

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More information

vi

Contents.

lord, 38. Case of reversioner, 39. Infants and communities, 40. General doctrine of seisin, 40.

Protection of possession, 40. Modern theories, 40. Possession and criminal law, 41. Possession and the law of tort, 41. Possession as a bulwark of property, 42. Possession as a kind of right, 42. Contrast between various principles, 43. The various principles in English law, 44. Disseisin as an offence, 44. Disseisin as a tort, 44. Possessory action against the third hand, 45. Proof of seisin and proof of ownership, 45. Seisin as a root of title, 46.

Introduction of possessory actions, 46. The novel disseisin, 47. Protection of wrongful seisin, 49. Relativity of seisin, 50. Novelty of the disseisin, 51. 'Unjustly and without judgment,' 52. Rigorous prohibition of self-help, 52. Trespass and disseisin, 53. Disseisin of absent possessor, 53. Scope of the assize, 54. The assize and the third hand, 55.

The mort d'ancestor, 56. A summary action, 56. A possessory action, 57. Seisin as of fee, 58. Exclusion of proprietary pleas, 58. Principle of the assize, 59. Is seisin heritable? 60. Seisin in law, 60. Acquisition of seisin by an abator, 61. Scope of the assize, 61.

The writs of entry, 62. The writ of right, 62. Invention of writs of entry, 63. Writs sur disseisin, 64. Scope of the action, 64. The English possessorium and the canon law, 66. Other writs of entry, 67. Historical evolution of these writs, 68. Their principle, 70. Active and passive transmission, 70. The doctrine of degrees, 70. Are these writs possessory? 72.

The hierarchy of actions and of seisins, 74, 75. Is the writ of right possessory? 75. Relativity of ownership, 77. Ancient history of ownership and possession, 77. Seisin and 'estates,' 78. Seisin and title, 80.

§ 3. Conveyance, pp. 80—106.

Modes of acquiring rights in land, 80. No title by occupation, 80. No acquisitive prescription, 81. Alluvion etc., 82. Escheat, forfeiture, reversion, 82.

The gift of land, 82. Feoffment, 82. Expression of the donor's will, 82. Livery of seisin, 83. The ancient German conveyance, 84. Symbolic livery, 85. Anglo-Saxon land-books, 87. Law in the Norman age, 87. Demand for a real livery, 88. Practice in cent. xiii., 90. Royal conveyances, 90.

The release, 90. The quit-claim, 91. The surrender, 92. The change of estate, 92. Gifts when the donor is not in occupation, 93. Attornment, 93. Feoffments with remainders, 94. Charters of feoffment, 94.

The fine, 94. Origin of fines, 95. Practice in the Norman age, 96. Possession under a fine, 96. Fines in the Angevin age, 96. Procedure for levying a fine, 98. Form of the fine, 99. Advantages of a fine, 100. Evidence secured, 100. Action on a fine, 100. The preclusive bar, 101. The year and day, 102. Value of the bar, 102. The married woman's fine, 102. Conveyance of reversions, 103. Family settlements, 103. The fine and seisin, 103. A judgment gives no seisin, 103. A fine gives none, 104. The fine does not convey land, 104. Return to seisin, 105.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More informationContents.

vii

§ 4. The Term of Years, pp. 106—117.

The term of years, 106. Attempts to treat it as ius in personam, 106. Insecurity of the termor, 107. Failure of the old doctrine, 107. The termor and the writ of trespass, 108. Further protection of the termor, 109. Seisin and possession, 110. Explanation of the termor's history, 110. Early leases for years, 111. Why the termor has no freehold, 113. The termor and the farmer, 113. Influence of Roman theory, 114. The term as a chattel, 115. Chattels real, 116.

§ 5. The Gage of Land, pp. 117—124.

Gage and wed, 117. Antiquity of gages, 118. Mortgage and vifgage, 119. Glanvill's gage, 120. Disappearance of the Glanvillian gage, 120. The gage and the beneficial lease, 121. The Bractonian gage, 122. The classical mortgage, 122. The mortgagee in possession, 123.

§ 6. Incorporeal Things, pp. 124—149.

Incorporeal things, 124. Their thinglikeness, 124. The seignory as a thing, 125. Rights of lord against tenant, 125. Contract and thing, 126. Rights of lord against the world, 127. Seisin of services, 128. Conveyance of seignory, 128. Rents as things, 129. Various kinds of rents, 129. Non-tenurial rents, 130. Rents charge as things, 130. Rents owed by land, 131. The rent-owner and the world, 131. Creation and transfer of rents, 132. Annuities as things, 133. Corodies as things, 134. Offices as things, 135. Advowsons as things, 136. Actions for advowsons, 137. Conveyance of advowsons, 138. Seisin of advowsons, 139. Rights of common as things, 140. Possessory protection of rights of common, 140. Law of prescription, 140. Incorporeals acquired by prescription, 141. Possessory protection of inchoate rights, 142. Prescription for annuities, 143. Prescription for franchises, 144. Appurtenances and grosses, 144. Easements and profits, 145. Liberty and serfage as things, 146. Marital rights and possession, 147. Wardships as things, 148. Landlikeness of the incorporeals, 148.

§ 7. Movable Goods, pp. 149—183.

Ownership and possession of chattels, 149. Obscurity of the subject, 150. Chattel and cattle, 150. Pecuniary character of chattels, 151. Possession of chattels, 152. Is there any ownership of movables? 153. Specific recovery of goods in England, 153. Foreign law: Mobilia non habent sequelam, 155. Explanations of this rule, 155.

The pursuit of thieves, 157. The bailee pursues the thief, 159. The bailor's action against the bailee, 159. Bracton's actio furti, 159. Procedure in the action, 160. Scope of the action, 161. Defences to

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More information

viii

Contents.

the action, 162. Defence of birth and rearing, 163. Defence by voucher, 163. Defence of honest purchase, 164. Stolen goods recovered from the honest purchaser, 164. Transformation of the action, 165. Action of trespass de bonis asportatis, 166. Scope of this action, 166. No action of trespass against the third hand, 167. Limitation of self-help, 168.

The bailment, 169. The bailee and the wrong-doer, 170. Liability of bailees, 170. The bailor and the third hand, 172. Action of detinue, 173. Scope of detinue, 174. No real action for movables, 175. Has the bailor property? 176. Evolution of ownership, 177. Pecuniary character of chattels, 178. Uncertainty of legal theory, 180. Conveyance of movables, 180. Real and personal property, 181.

CHAPTER V.

CONTRACT, pp. 184—239.

Late development of a law of contract, 184. The real and the formal contract, 185. Fides facta: the formal contract, 186. The hand-grasp, 188. The church and the fides facta, 189. Oath and faith, 190. The written document as a form, 192. English law in cent. xii., 193. Medieval Roman law, 194. The canon law, 195. Evolution of a law of contract on the Continent, 195. Influence of Roman and canon law in England, 196. English law in cent. xiii., 197.

The pledge of faith, 197. Fidei laesio and the church courts, 197. Struggle between church and state, 198. Pledged faith in ecclesiastical law, 202. The king's court and the pledge of faith, 202.

The action of debt, 203. The recognizance, 203. The action of debt in Glanvill, 204. Rarity of actions of debt, 205. Proprietary character of the action, 206. Debt and sale, 207. Earnest and God's penny, 208. Law of sale, 209. Scope of the action of debt, 210. Doctrine of quid pro quo, 212. Gratuitous gifts and promises in early law, 213. Proof of debts, 214. Damages in debt, 215. Limit to the action, 216.

The action of covenant, 216. Covenants and leases, 217. Scope of the action, 218. Requirement of writing, 219. Action of account, 221. Covenants in the local courts, 222. Sealed documents, 223. History of documents, 224. The single bond, 225. Mercantile documents, 226.

Assignment of debts, 226. Agency in contract, 228. Agency and 'uses,' 228. Chattels held to the use of another, 229. Lands held to the use of another, 230. The use of lands, 232. Feudalism and contract, 232.

Note on the early history of the use, 233.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More informationContents.

ix

CHAPTER VI.

INHERITANCE, pp. 240—363.

§ 1. Antiquities, pp. 240—260.

The history of the family : a controversial theme, 240. The family as a unit, 240. No clans in England, 241. No permanent organization of the blood-feud group, 242. That group not a permanent legal unit, 243. The kindred as a local group, 243. Land-owning groups, 244. The kindred no corporation, 244.

The household and land-ownership, 245. Forms of co-ownership, 245. Relative antiquity of co-ownership and ownership in severalty, 247. Co-ownership and aliquot shares, 247. Birth-rights, 248. History of birth-rights, 248. Birth-rights and inheritance, 248. Inheritance older than birth-rights, 249. Antiquity of inheritance, 249. Family ownership in England, 251. Birth-rights in England, 251. The restraint of alienation, 253. Partition of inheritances, 253. Appointment of heirs, 254. Restraint of alienation before the Conquest, 254. Last words on family ownership, 255.

Nature of inheritance, 255. Inheritance and representation of the dead, 256. Representation in modern law, 256. Representation in ancient times, 257. Representation and religion, 257. Inheritance of debts and credits, 258. The inheritance need not descend in one mass, 259. Transition to later law, 260.

§ 2. The Law of Descent, pp. 260—313.

Primary rules, 260. Preference of descendants, 260. Preference of males, 261. Influence of feudalism, 261. Primogeniture, 262. Primogeniture before the Conquest, 263. Primogeniture in Normandy, 264. In later Norman law, 265. In English law of the Norman age, 266. The Anglo-Norman Leges, 267. Primogeniture under the Angevins, 268. In Glanvill and Bracton, 268. Partible lands, 270. Gavelkind, 271. Disgavelling, 272. Spread of primogeniture, 273. Inheritance by co-heiresses, 274. Coheirs and parage, 276. The law of parage, 277. The lord's interest in primogeniture, 278. Inheritance of villein lands, 278. Ultimogeniture, 279. Origin of ultimogeniture, 280. Impartible peasant holdings, 281. The peasant's one child, 282.

Representation in inheritance, 283. Influence of John's accession, 284. Casus Regis, 285.

The exclusion of ascendants, 286. The rule about lord and heir, 289. The question in Glanvill, 289. Effect of homage on inheritance, 291. Why may not the lord inherit? 292. The leaning towards equality, 293. Exclusion of the lord and exclusion of ascendants, 294. The ascendants in Scottish law, 295.

Inheritance among collaterals, 295. The parentelic system, 297. Rules for collaterals of the same parentela, 298. Choice among ascending lines, 298. Paterna paternis, materna maternis, 299. Choice among

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More information

admissible stocks, 300. Worthiness of blood, 301. The half blood, 302. Exclusion of the half-blood in modern law, 305. Co-parceny and partition, 306. Limits of inheritance, 307.

Restraint of alienation in favour of expectant heirs, 308. Glanvill's rules, 308. The heir's consent to conveyances, 309. Disappearance of the restraint, 311. Causes of the change, 311. Rebutting effect of a warranty, 312. Suddenness of the change, 313.

§ 3. The Last Will, pp. 314—356.

Germs of the last will, 314. What is a will? 314. Ambulatory character of a will, 315. Hereditative character of a will, 316.

The Anglo-Saxon cwiðe, 316. The post obit gift, 317. The post obit gift and the royal land-book, 318. The death-bed distribution, 318. The written cwiðe, 319. The right to bequeath, 320. Wills and death-bed gifts, 321. Intestacy in Cnut's day, 322. The lord and the cwiðe, 322.

Norman law, 323. The will under the Norman kings, 323. Post obit gifts of chattels, 324. Evolution of definite law, 325.

Feudalism and wills of land, 326. Post obit gifts in the Norman age, 326. Post obit gifts of land condemned, 327. The law in Glanvill, 327. Testamentary power abolished in the interest of the heir, 328. Attempts to devise land, 329. Devisable burgages, 330. Probate of burgage wills, 330. Devises of chattels real, 331.

The church and the testament, 331. Progress of ecclesiastical claims, 332. The church victorious, 333. The lay courts and the last will, 333. The will with executors, 334. Origin of the executor, 335. The executor in England and elsewhere, 336. The medieval will, 337. Its form, 337. Its substance, 338. The testator's care for his soul, 339. Usual clauses, 340. Probate, 341. Prerogative probate, 342.

Control over executors, 342. The executor in temporal courts, 343. Executor and heir in Glanvill, 344. Executor and heir in Bracton, 345. The collection of debts, 346. The executor as personal representative, 347.

Limits of testamentary power, 348. Legitim in cent. xii. and xiii., 349. Legitim in Glanvill, 350. Legitim in Bracton, 350. Later history of legitim, 351. The king's court and legitim, 352. The church courts and legitim, 352. Legitim in wills, 353. Review of the history of legitim, 355.

§ 4. Intestacy, pp. 356—363.

Horror of intestacy, 356. Bracton on intestacy, 357. Stories of intestacy, 357. Desperation in Normandy, 359. The bishop and the kinsfolk, 360. Intestate succession, 360. The administrator, 361. The next of kin, 361. Letters of administration, 362. Separation of chattels from land, 362. Heirlooms, 363. Reviews, 363.

CHAPTER VII.

FAMILY LAW, pp. 364—447.

§ 1. Marriage, pp. 364—399.

Antiquities, 364. The act of marriage, 365. Growth of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, 366. Victory of the church courts, 367. Canonical doctrine of marriage, 368. No ceremony requisite, 369. Application of canon law in England, 371. The Queen v. Millis, 372. Law of the English church courts, 372. The temporal law and marriage, 374. Marriage and dower, 374. Marriage and inheritance, 375. Putative marriages, 376. Recognition of de facto marriages, 380. The marital possessorium, 381. Reluctance to bastardize the dead, 382. Possessory marriage in the temporal courts, 383. Solemnization and possessory protection, 384. Unprovable marriages, 385.

The idea of marriage, 385. Impediments to marriage, 385. Consanguinity, 386. Prohibited degrees, 387. Affinity, 388. Marriage of infants, 389. Age of the parties, 390. Marriage of young children, 391.

Divorce and nullity, 392. Divorce from bed and board, 393. Divorce and temporal law, 394. A wife conveyed, 395.

Bastardy, 396. Mantle children, 397. Presumptive paternity, 398.

§ 2. Husband and Wife, pp. 399—436.

Variety in the law of husband and wife, 399. Community of goods, 400. No community in England, 402. English peculiarities, 402. Community and equality, 403.

Final form of the common law, 403. (1) Wife's land, 403. (2) Husband's land, 404. (3) Wife's chattels, 404. (4) Husband's chattels, 405. (5) Husband's liability, 405. (6) Wife's contracts, 405.

Law in cent. xiii.; its general idea, 405. Divorce of realty from personalty, 407.

The wife's land, 407. Husband and wife in court, 408. Husband's rights in wife's land, 409. Alienation of wife's land, 409. The wife's fine, 411. The husband as guardian, 414. Tenancy by the curtesy, 414. Tenancy per legem Angliæ, 415. The law of England a courteous law, 416. The widower's free-bench, 418. Feudalism and curtesy, 419.

Dower, 420. The maximum dower, 421. Assignment of dower, 422. Wife's rights during marriage, 422. Alienation by husband, 424. The husband in litigation, 425. Dower as a gift, 425. Dower and the church, 426. The villein's widow, 427.

Chattels of husband and wife, 427. Germs of a community, 427. Husband's death, 428. Wife's death, 428. Wife's testament, 429. The husband's intestacy, 430. Rejection of community, 432. English law and separation of goods, 432.

Payments to husband and wife, 433. Conveyances to husband and wife, 434. The wife's contracts, 434. The influence of seisin, 435. The personal relationship, 436. Civil death of husband, 436.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More information

xii

Contents.

§ 3. Infancy and Guardianship, pp. 436—445.

Paternal power in ancient times, 436. The tutelage of women, 437. Paternal power in cent. xiii., 438. Infancy and majority, 438. Proprietary rights of infants, 439. Infants in seisin, 439. Infants as plaintiffs, 440. Infants as defendants, 442. Demurrer of the parol, 443. Law of guardianship, 443. The guardian no curator, 445. The king's guardianship, 445.

Review of English private law, 445.

CHAPTER VIII.

CRIME AND TORT, pp. 448—557.

§ 1. The Ancient Law, pp. 449—462.

Crime and wrong in old law, 449. Outlawry in old law, 449. Blood-feud, 450. The system of wite and bót, 451. True punishment, 451. Kinds of punishment, 452. Crime and revenue, 453. Cnut's pleas of the crown, 453. Pleas of the crown in Domesday Book, 454. Norman pleas of the sword, 455. Pleas of the crown in the Norman age, 456. Crime and punishment in Domesday Book, 456. Criminal law in the Leges, 457. Changes in cent. xii., 458. Disappearance of wite and bót, 459. Oppressive character of the old system, 460. Arbitrary element in the old system, 461.

§ 2. Felony and Treason, pp. 462—511.

Causes of the change, 462. The king's peace, 463. Felony, 464. Import of felony, 467. Premeditated assault, 468. Malice aforethought, 469. The group of felonies, 470.

Culpability in ancient law, 470. Causation in ancient law, 470. Absolute liability for harm done, 471. Liability for the acts of slaves and beasts, 472. The deodand, 473. Restriction of culpability, 474. Mens rea, 476. Roman influence, 477.

The felonies, 478. Homicide, 478. Justifiable homicide, 478. Misadventure and self-defence, 479. Pardons for excusable homicide, 480. Practice in cases of excusable homicide, 480. Liability and misadventure, 481. The pardon and the offended kin, 482. History of misadventure, 483. Homicide by young children, 484. Limits of misadventure and self-defence, 484. Homicide unemendable, 485. Murder, 485. The murder fine, 487. Suicide, 488.

Wounding etc., 488. Rape, 490. Arson, 492. Burglary, 492. Robbery, 493. Larceny, 494. Manifest theft, 496. Petty larceny, 497. Definition of larceny, 498.

Treason contrasted with felony, 500. Treason and the statute of 1352, 502. Early history of treason, 503. Elements of treason, 504. Treason by levying war, 505. Compass of treason in cent. xiii., 506.

Accessories before the fact, 509. Accessories after the fact, 510. Review of the felonies, 511.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More informationContents.

xiii

§ 3. The Trespasses, pp. 511—543.

Classification of offences, 511. Trespass in the wide sense, 512. Minor punishments, 513. Amercements, 513. Imprisonment, 516. Fines, 517. Other minor punishments, 518.

Procedure against minor offences, 518. Civil actions, 519. Presentments in local courts, 519. Presentments in the eyre, 520. Misdemeanours, 521.

Penal damages, 522. Novelty of actions for damages, 522. Damages and specific relief, 523. Growth of actions for damages, 524. The days before damages, 525. Actions of trespass, 526. Limits of trespass, 527. Master's liability, 528. Recent history of master's liability, 528. Liability of slave-owner and house-father in old law, 529. House-father's liability in Bracton's day, 530. Tort, crime and master's liability, 530. Identification of master and servant, 531. Respondeat superior, 533. Damage and injury, 534. Deceit, 534. Fraud as a defence, 535. Defamation, 536. Wrongful prosecution, 539. Forgery, 540. Perjury, 541.

§ 4. Ecclesiastical Offences, pp. 543—557.

The sexual sins, 543. Heresy, 544. Heresy on the Continent, 544. England and continental heresy, 546. Heresy in England, 547. Heresy in the text-books, 549. Later cases of heresy, 549. Was heresy criminal? 551. The writ for burning heretics, 551. Sorcery, 552. History of sorcery, 553. Sorcery in the text-books, 554. Cases of sorcery, 554. Sorcery in later times, 555. Unnatural crime, 556.

Inefficiency of the criminal law, 557.

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE, pp. 558—673.

§ 1. The Forms of Action, pp. 558—573.

Our formulary system, 558. An English peculiarity, 558. Growth of the forms, 559. The formulary system not of Roman origin, 559. Roman and English formulas, 560. Life of the forms, 561. Choice between the forms, 561. Little law for actions in general, 562. Modern and medieval procedure, 562. Formalism and liberty, 563. The golden age of the forms, 564. Number of the forms, 564. Statistics, 565. Differences between the forms, 568. Classification of the forms, 569. Affinities between the forms, 569. Attempts to apply the Roman classification, 570. Roman and English lines, 571. Civil and criminal procedure, 572.

§ 2. Self-help, pp. 574—578.

Self-help in medieval law, 574. Distress, 575. Distress for rent, 576. Replevin, 577. Distress and seisin, 578.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09516-7 - The History of English Law: Before the Time of Edward I, Second Edition - Volume II

Frederick Pollock and Frederick William Maitland

Table of Contents

More information

 § 3. Process, pp. 578—597.

Process, 578. Summary justice, 578. The hand-having thief, 579. Summary justice in the king's court, 579. Summary justice and outlawry, 580. Outlawry as process, 580. Arrest, 582. Summary arrest, 582. Arrest after accusation, 583. Mainprise, 584. Replevisable prisoners, 584. The king's court and arrest, 586. Royal control over justice, 587. The writ de odio et atia, 587. Origin of the writ, 587. Effect of the writ, 588. Later history of the writ, 588. Mainprise and bail, 589. Sanctuary and abjuration, 590. Civil process, 591. Forbearance of medieval law, 591. Process in real actions, 592. Process in personal actions, 593. Outlawry as civil process, 593. No judgment against the absent, 594. Specific relief, 595. Final process, 596. Costs, 597.

 § 4. Pleading and Proof, pp. 598—673.

Ancient modes of proof, 598. The ordeal, 598. Proof by battle, 600. Proof by oath, 600. Oaths of witnesses, 601. Allotment of proof, 602. Proof in cent. xiii., 603.

The plaintiff's count, 604. The offer of proof, 605. The suit, 606. Function of the suitors, 606. Number of the suitors, 607. The defence, 607. Thwert-ut-nay, 608. Examination of the plaintiff's suit, 609. The defendant's offer of proof, 610. Special pleading, 611. The exception, 611. Exceptions in assizes, 612. Spread of the exception, 614. Laxity of pleading, 615. The exception and the jury, 616. Proof of exceptions, 616. Assize and jury, 617. The jury and the appeal, 618. Exception and denial, 618. The jury and the general issue, 619.

Composition of the jury, 621. The jurors as witnesses, 622. Arbitral element in the jury, 623. Communal element in the jury, 624. Quasi-judicial element, 624. Unanimity of the jury, 625. Verdict and evidence, 627. Fact and law, 629. Special verdicts, 630. Justices and jurors, 631. Popularity of the jury, 631. Fate of the older proofs, 632. Trial by battle, 632. Wager of law, 634. The decisory oath, 636. Trial by witnesses, 637. Other trials, 639. Questions of law, 640. Victory of the jury, 641.

The presenting jury, 641. Fama publica, 642. Composition of the jury, 642. The coroner's inquest, 643. Presentments and ordeal, 644. Practice of the eyres, 644. Indictments for felony, 647. The second jury, 648. Refusal of trial, 650. Peine forte et dure, 651. Presentments of minor offences, 652. The trial, 653. The collection of evidence, 655. The canonical inquisition, 656. English and foreign inquisitions, 658. Torture and the law of evidence, 659.

Miscellaneous points, 661. The king in litigation, 661. Criminal informations, 662. Voucher to warranty, 662. Appellate proceedings, 664. Attaint, 665. Certification, 665. Prohibition, 665. Removal of actions, 666. False judgment, 666. Error, 668. Records and courts of record, 669. Function of the judges, 670. Considerants of judgments, 671. Last words, 672.