Preface

The research on which this monograph is based was financed by the Department of Applied Economics of the University of Cambridge, assisted in part by a grant from the Human Sciences Committee of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research (now the Science Research Council). We thank both these bodies for their support.

The research was directed jointly by the two senior authors as Research Associates of the Department of Applied Economics, while the two junior authors were members of the Department's research staff. The following were also, at various times, engaged on the project: as research officer, Mr Michael Rose; as research assistants, Mrs D. Dutkiewicz, Miss P. Ralph and Miss R. Baxendale; and as interviewers, Messrs. P. Batten, J. Dichmont, D. Goddard, P. Jenkins and R. Payne. We acknowledge their valuable collaboration and, in particular, that of Mr Rose during the period of the main interviewing programme. Our appreciation must also be expressed to the many members of the Department's computing and typing staff who have given assistance to the project at all stages.

In carrying out our work in the field, we received the co-operation of a large number of individuals and organisations. Our thanks are due, in particular, to the following: Messrs R. R. Hopkins, W. Butt and R. Hamilton of Vauxhall Motors Ltd; Mr R. Grant of The Skefko Ball Bearing Company Ltd; Messrs P. Lister and R. Northam of Laporte Chemicals Ltd; Mr A. J. Sjogren of the Amalgamated Engineering Union; and Mr W. J. Bird of the National Union of General and Municipal Workers. National Opinion Polls Ltd kindly made data available to us from their national surveys of voting intentions. We are, of course, most of all indebted to the five hundred or so men and women who, in total, afforded us over a thousand hours of their time in interviews—with quite remarkable tolerance and goodwill.

Finally, we must acknowledge the advice, information and other assistance that we have received from our academic colleagues both in Cambridge and elsewhere. Those who have helped are too numerous to mention individually but we hope that they will, collectively, accept our gratitude.
