

Cambridge University Press
0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
Robert Davidson
Frontmatter
More information

THE CAMBRIDGE BIBLE COMMENTARY

NEW ENGLISH BIBLE

GENERAL EDITORS

P. R. ACKROYD, A. R. C. LEANEY, J. W. PACKER

GENESIS 1-11

Cambridge University Press
0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
Robert Davidson
Frontmatter
More information

GENESIS 1-11

COMMENTARY BY
ROBERT DAVIDSON
*Professor of Old Testament Language and Literature,
University of Glasgow*

Cambridge University Press
0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
Robert Davidson
Frontmatter
More information

Published by the Press Syndicate of the University of Cambridge
The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge CB2 1RP
40 West 20th Street, New York, NY 10011-4211, USA
10 Stamford Road, Oakleigh, Melbourne 3166, Australia

© Cambridge University Press 1973

Library of Congress catalogue number: 72-93675

ISBN 0 521 08618 3 hardback
ISBN 0 521 09760 6 paperback

First published 1973
Reprinted 1979 1980 1987 1990 1993

Transferred to digital printing 2004

Cambridge University Press
0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
Robert Davidson
Frontmatter
More information

GENERAL EDITORS' PREFACE

The aim of this series is to provide the text of the New English Bible closely linked to a commentary in which the results of modern scholarship are made available to the general reader. Teachers and young people have been especially kept in mind. The commentators have been asked to assume no specialized theological knowledge, and no knowledge of Greek and Hebrew. Bare references to other literature and multiple references to other parts of the Bible have been avoided. Actual quotations have been given as often as possible.

The completion of the New Testament series in 1967 provided a basis for the production of the much larger Old Testament and Apocrypha series, which was completed in 1979. The welcome accorded to the earlier volumes encouraged the editors to follow the same general pattern, and an attempt was made to take account of criticisms which had been offered. One necessary change has been the inclusion of the translators' footnotes, since in the Old Testament these are more extensive, and essential for the understanding of the text.

Within the severe limits imposed by the size and scope of the series, each commentator has attempted to set out the main findings of recent biblical scholarship and to describe the historical background of the text. The main theological issues have also been critically discussed.

Much attention has been given to the form of the volumes. The aim is to produce books each of which will be read consecutively from first to last page. The

Cambridge University Press
0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
Robert Davidson
Frontmatter
More information

GENERAL EDITORS' PREFACE

introductory material leads naturally into the text, which itself leads into the alternating sections of the commentary.

The series is accompanied by three volumes of a more general character. Understanding the Old Testament sets out to provide the larger historical and archaeological background, to say something about the life and thought of the people of the Old Testament, and to answer the question 'Why should we study the Old Testament?'. The Making of the Old Testament is concerned with the formation of the books of the Old Testament and Apocrypha in the context of the ancient near eastern world, and with the ways in which these books have come down to us in the life of the Jewish and Christian communities. Old Testament Illustrations contains maps, diagrams and photographs with an explanatory text. These three volumes are designed to provide material helpful to the understanding of the individual books and their commentaries, but they are also prepared so as to be of use quite independently.

P. R. A.
A. R. C. L.
J. W. P.

CONTENTS

The footnotes to the N.E.B. text	page ix
* * * * *
Behind the book	I
The sources of the book	2
The purpose of Genesis I-II	8
The meaning of myth	9
* * * * *
The creation of the world	12
The beginnings of history	28
The flood and the tower of Babel	64
* * * * *
A NOTE ON FURTHER READING	113
INDEX	115

Cambridge University Press
0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
Robert Davidson
Frontmatter
More information

EDITOR'S PREFACE

I wish gratefully to acknowledge the help I have received in the preparation of this commentary from the general editors, Professor P. R. Ackroyd, Professor A. R. C. Leaney and the Rev. J. W. Packer. Their incisive comments have helped at many points to clarify my own thinking; their eagle eyes have rid the manuscript of many errors. Those which remain are my responsibility. I am also indebted to Mrs Carol Weimar for typing assistance and to Miss Moyra McCallum for proof reading and the preparation of the index. A commentator on Genesis is fortunate in the material on which he can draw. My indebtedness to previous commentators will be evident to all who have any acquaintance with the subject. Some of the books which have been most helpful to me will be found listed at the end of this volume.

R. D.

THE FOOTNOTES TO THE N.E.B. TEXT

The footnotes to the N.E.B. text are designed to help the reader either to understand particular points of detail – the meaning of a name, the presence of a play upon words – or to give information about the actual text. Where the Hebrew text appears to be erroneous, or there is doubt about its precise meaning, it may be necessary to turn to manuscripts which offer a different wording, or to ancient translations of the text which may suggest a better reading, or to offer a new explanation based upon conjecture. In such cases, the footnotes supply very briefly an indication of the evidence, and whether the solution proposed is one that is regarded as possible or as probable. Various abbreviations are used in the footnotes.

(1) Some abbreviations are simply of terms used in explaining a point: ch(s)., chapter(s); cp.., compare; lit.., literally; mng.., meaning; MS(S)., manuscript(s), i.e. Hebrew manuscript(s), unless otherwise stated; om.., omit(s); or., indicating an alternative interpretation; poss.., possible; prob.., probable; rdg.., reading; Vs(s)., Version(s).

(2) Other abbreviations indicate sources of information from which better interpretations or readings may be obtained.

Aq. Aquila, a Greek translator of the Old Testament (perhaps about A.D. 130) characterized by great literalness.

Aram. Aramaic – may refer to the text in this language (used in parts of Ezra and Daniel), or to the meaning of an Aramaic word. Aramaic belongs to the same language family as Hebrew, and is known from about 1000 B.C. over a wide area of the Middle East, including Palestine.

Heb. Hebrew – may refer to the Hebrew text or may indicate the literal meaning of the Hebrew word.

Josephus Flavius Josephus (A.D. 37/8–about 100), author of the Jewish Antiquities, a survey of the whole history of his people, directed partly at least to a non-Jewish audience, and of various other works, notably one on the Jewish War (that of A.D. 66–73) and a defence of Judaism (Against Apion).

Luc. Sept. Lucian's recension of the Septuagint, an important edition made in Antioch in Syria about the end of the third century A.D.

Pesh. Peshitta or Peshitto, the Syriac version of the Old Testament.

Cambridge University Press
 0521097606 - Genesis 1-11
 Robert Davidson
 Frontmatter
More information

FOOTNOTES TO THE N.E.B. TEXT

- Syriac is the name given chiefly to a form of Eastern Aramaic used by the Christian community. The translation varies in quality, and is at many points influenced by the Septuagint or the Targums.
- Sam.* Samaritan Pentateuch – the form of the first five books of the Old Testament as used by the Samaritan community. It is written in Hebrew in a special form of the Old Hebrew script, and preserves an important form of the text, somewhat influenced by Samaritan ideas.
- Scroll(s)* Scroll(s), commonly called the Dead Sea Scrolls, found at or near Qumran from 1947 onwards. These important manuscripts shed light on the state of the Hebrew text as it was developing in the last centuries B.C. and the first century A.D.
- Sept.* Septuagint (meaning ‘seventy’); often abbreviated as the Roman numeral (LXX), the name given to the main Greek version of the Old Testament. According to tradition, the Pentateuch was translated in Egypt in the third century B.C. by 70 (or 72) translators, six from each tribe, but the precise nature of its origin and development is not fully known. It was intended to provide Greek-speaking Jews with a convenient translation. Subsequently it came to be much revered by the Christian community.
- Symm.* Symmachus, another Greek translator of the Old Testament (beginning of the third century A.D.), who tried to combine literalness with good style. Both Lucian and Jerome viewed his version with favour.
- Targ.* Targum, a name given to various Aramaic versions of the Old Testament, produced over a long period and eventually standardized, for the use of Aramaic-speaking Jews.
- Theod.* Theodotion, the author of a revision of the Septuagint (probably second century A.D.), very dependent on the Hebrew text.
- Vulg.* Vulgate, the most important Latin version of the Old Testament, produced by Jerome about A.D. 400, and the text most used throughout the Middle Ages in western Christianity.
- [. . .] In the text itself square brackets are used to indicate probably late additions to the Hebrew text.
 (Fuller discussion of a number of these points may be found in The Making of the Old Testament in this series.)