

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More information

INDEX

- abstraction in dramatic language, 13, 14; in Beckett, 151, 152; imposed by incantatory rhythm, 10; liturgy as a move towards, 109; in Pinter, 175–7
- absurd, the: Shaw and, 5, 50, 75–84; Shaw's use of word, 50n, 84–6
- action: disjunction of speech and, 20, 22; speech as (Shaw), 38; spoken (Pirandello), 18, 54; doubleness in (Eliot), 95; see also stasis
- actor-characters: in Elizabethan and Jacobean drama, 28; in Osborne, 32, 205–7
- Aeschylus, 91, 97; first to employ duologue, 153
- aestheticism: Shaw's recoil from, 42, 44, 46, 47; and Eliot, 98
- alienation of man in Western society, Hegel–Marx theory of, 26
- Archer, William, supports imitative language, 5–6
- Arden, John: attempts to revitalise drama by use of pre-literary language, 30, 213–16; compared with Synge, 214; contrasted with Pinter, 228; exotic prose of, 227–8; interplay of languages in, 216–20, 228; language-consciousness of, 30; turns to situations with making of ballad plays, 220–7
- Armstrong's Last Goodnight*, 220, 223–6, 228
- The Business of Good Government*, 226
- Friday's Hiding* (mime play), 13n
- The Hero Rises Up*, 214n
- Ironhand* (adaptation of Goethe's Götz), 227n
- The Island of the Mighty*, 243
- The Life of Man*, 215
- Live Like Pigs*, 214, 218–20, 224n, 227
- Serjeant Musgrave's Dance*, 13, 80n, 220, 221–3, 228
- Telling a True Tale* (essay), 215–16
- The Waters of Babylon*, 217–18
- The Workhouse Donkey*, 214n
- Aristophanes, 97, 100, 104, 214; The Birds by, 49, 104n
- art, increasingly short cycles of decay and renewal in, 26
- art/anti-art dilemma of Shaw, 41, 43, 46
- Artaud, Antonin, on non-verbal language, 9, 29, 230, 231n

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More informationIndex

- Atkins, Anselm, on Lucky's speech, 140
- Auden, W. H., on Shaw's devotion to music, 51
- Auerbach, Erich, Mimesis by (direct speech), 35
- ballads, Arden and, 30, 214, 215, 217–18, 219–20, 223–4
- ballet, 8, 87, 88
- Barish, Jonas A., on theatrical and anti-theatrical theatres, 30
- Barthes, Roland, on the opposition of speech and writing, 242; extended idea of 'language', 8n
- Baudelaire, C. P., 100
- Beckett, Samuel, 130–8; and Berkeley's philosophy, 26; contrasted with Pinter, 137, 169–72, 190; dialogue in and out of monologue in, 20, 131, 136, 153–64; experiences language as 'abstracted to death', 231; inner development of languages of, 233–4; language of, recreated for each new play, 173; language of, recreated from ruins of language, 24, 128, 135, 137, 138–52; philosophical critique of language, 3, 4; potential convergence of Eliot and, 130–1; and shape of sentences, 109, 134; static-perennial cycle in plays of, 47, 171; theatricality of, 30, 143, 233; verbalism of, 133; wordless drama of, 11–12
- Act Without Words I and II* (mimes), 11–12
- All that Fall*, 2, 27; monologue into dialogue in, 154, 155, 157–9
- Cascando* (radio play), 137, 141n, 152; monologue in, 154, 163–4
- Embers*, 141; monologue into dialogue in, 154
- Endgame*, 171; exploitation and parody of old-style tragedy in, 144–7; monologue into dialogue in, 156–7
- Happy Days*, 135, 148, 149–51; counterpoint to speech in, 12; monologue into dialogue in, 154, 160–2
- Krapp's Last Tape*, 12, 16, 147–8, 148–9; monologue into dialogue in, 154, 159–60
- Lessness* (story), 136n, 237
- Molloy*, 92n
- Not I*, 236–7, 242
- Play*, 15, 25, 153; monologue in, 154; triangle of contending voices in, 131, 132, 151–2
- Proust* (essay), 131, 133, 139n
- Three Dialogues*, 134
- The Unnamable*, 134, 141n; monologue in, 155
- Waiting for Godot*, 130; contrasted styles of dramatic speech in, 156; dialogue in, 154; dramatises breakdown of language, 24, 78, 139–44; elements of circus clown and commedia dell'arte in, 233; end of, 20; French version of, 143n; opening line of, 170; pressure of mime against words in, 11–12; reduction of thought to a broken machine in, 199–200
- Watt* (novel), 154
- Words and Music* (radio play), 13, 152; monologue in, 154, 163
- Bentley, Eric, on Shaw, 63
- Bergson, Henri, on verbal comedy and parody, 64
- Berkeley, George, philosophy of, 26
- Berne, Eric, Games People Play by, 178
- Blackmur, R. P., language as gesture, 242
- blank verse, Shakespearean: as an exhausted language, 92
- Blin, Roger, on Beckett's gift for dialogue, 155
- Bond, Edward, pluralism of styles in plays of, 234
- Boulton, James, on Pinter, 168
- Bradbury, Malcolm, in introduction to Contemporary Criticism, 243

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More information

Index

- Bradley, F. H., Eliot's study of, 110
- Brecht, Bertolt: Arden on, 215n; attacks art-literature, 46; draws on Aristophanes, 104; Galileo by, 226; The Messingkauf Dialogues by, 29; range of languages used by, 28–9; St Joan of the Stockyards by, 59n; Threepenny Opera by, 49; uses Noh plays, 234
- Brieux, Eugène, Shaw's preface to plays of, 56n
- Brown, John Russell, Theatre Language by, 21n, 237n, 242n
- Brustein, Robert, 20n (on Shaw), 67n, 234n
- Büchner, Georg, Woyzeck by, 24
- Bunyan, John, Shaw's use of style of, 44, 70, 76
- Burke, Kenneth, on linguistic motives, 230–1
- Castelvetro, Lodovico, on naturalism in drama, 17
- Celtic tradition of epic writing, 217
- Chekhov, Anton, 53; The Cherry Orchard by, 16, 56; classical naturalism in, 15, 38, 168; The Seagull by, 16, 21
- chorus: Eliot's development of, 101, 102–8; Nietzsche on, 98
- clowns, 10, 86; Beckett's use of elements from, 233
- Cocteau, Jean, La voix humaine by, 163
- Cohn, Ruby, on Beckett, 150
- Coleridge, S. T., and ballads, 213–14, 215
- comedy: of ideas (Shaw) 87; of manners, (Eliot) 96, (Pinter) 178, 188; of menace (Pinter) 176; parody as essential element in tradition of, 63; verbal, Bergson's definition of, 64
- commedia dell'arte*, 10; Beckett's debt to, 143, 233
- communication: gap between speech and, 112, 168; language as a barrier to, 22; pressure towards scenes of real, in Eliot, 112, 113, 114, 116
- confessional duologues, in Eliot, 116–23, 126
- Congreve, William, 64; Eliot on, 88n
- Conrad, Joseph, on everyday words, in Heart of Darkness, 235n
- 'conviction', Shaw's idea of inward relation between style and, 43, 44–5, 47n–48n
- Cooke, Deryck, The Language of Music by, 14n
- Cornford, Francis, The Origin of Attic Comedy by, 100, 102n
- costume speech, see under speech
- Coward, Noel, dialogue of, 111, 216
- Craig, Gordon, On the Art of the Theatre by, 9
- Creighton, Anthony, collaborator in Epitaph for George Dillon, 193
- criticism: and crisis, 1; flexible modes of language in drama call for flexible pluralistic body of, 237–9; possible contribution of verbal analysis to, 239–41
- Dante, 138, 150
- D'Arcy, Margareta, co-author of The Business of Good Government, 226, and The Island of the Mighty, 243
- Declaration* (1957), Osborne's contribution to, 196
- De Quincey, Thomas, on rhetoric and eloquence, 32
- dialect of the tribe: in Eliot, 108–15, 175; Synge and, 26
- dialogue, dramatic: between play and audience, 243; criticism of contexts and texture of, 239; in the gospels, 35–6, 37; and monologue (Beckett), 20, 131, 136, 153–64; in Osborne, 194–5, 197; in Pinter, 165, 166, 177, 187; see also language, spoken action, subtext
- didactic drama, Shaw on, 41, 43
- Dies Irae*, 94, 105
- documented language: in Osborne's

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More informationIndex

- documented language (cont.)
Luther, 193; in Shaw's Saint Joan, 74; in Weiss's The Investigation, 36–7
- Dryden, John, on serious plays, 53
 'dumbness, cult of', 25
- 'eavesdropping' by dramatists, 26, 53, 169
- Edel, Leon, on Henry James as dramatist, 7
- Eliot, T. S., 87–94; Arden and, 216–17; confessional duologues in, 116–23, 126; 'dialect of the tribe' in, 108–15, 175; evolution of language of, 94–7; experiences language as exhausted, 231, and as inadequate, 3, 4; as experimenter and as preserver, 128–9; linguistic dualism of, 19, 109–10; liturgy in, 13, 15, 88, 89, 94; liturgy and ritual in, 97–109; lower-class speech in, 115–16; movement from liturgy to naturalism in, 95, 96–7, 109, 115, 128; potential convergence of Beckett and, 130–1; relation of poetry and plays of, 123; recreates language for each new play, 173, 233; and Shakespearean blank verse, 92, 234; speech-of-appearance in, 31; the unsayable in, 19, 21n, 96, 104, 123–8
- After Strange Gods* (essay), 91
- Ash Wednesday* (poem), 123
- The Cocktail Party*, 130, 131–2, 171; confessional duologue in, 120–2, 126; language of, 111–13; liturgical echoes in, 108; the unsayable in, 125
- The Confidential Clerk*, 90; confessional duologue in, 119, 120; language of, 111, 113, 115; the unsayable in, 125
- The Elder Statesman*, 102; confessional duologue in, 116, 119, 120; language of, 111, 113–15; the unsayable in, 125
- The Family Reunion*: chorus in, 70n, 103–4, 107; confessional duologue in, 116, 117–19; Eliot's self-criticism of, 119n; liturgy and ritual in, 97, 99, 102; lower-class speech in, 115; at transition in Eliot's plays, 89n; the unsayable in, 124
- Four Elizabethan Dramatists* (essay), 5, 89
- Four Quartets* (poems), 97, 108, 121, 126
- Murder in the Cathedral*: Arden and, 217; choruses in, 99, 103, 104–6; confessional duologue in, 117; contemporary political jargon in, 33, 226; juxtaposed styles of speech in, 119; liturgy and ritual in, 93, 102, 107–8; rhythms of Everyman in, 3, 89, 91, 117; the unsayable in, 124
- On Poetry and Poets* (essays), 88n, 92, 119, 125, 129, 229
- 'Rhetoric' and Poetic Drama (essay), 88, 204–5
- The Rock*, 102
- The Sacred Wood* (essays), 87–8, 97
- Sweeney Agonistes*, 89, 91, 100–1, 130; affinity of, with Eliot's poetry, 123–4; dialogue in, based on everyday speech, 2, 26, 108–9, 175; elements of music hall in, 233; final chorus of, 103, 104, 108; parody of everyday speech in, 110
- Sweeney Erect*, 93
- The Use of Poetry and the Use of Criticism* (essay), 93n, 96
- The Waste Land* (poem), 80n, 93; new combination of known styles in, 34
- Elizabethan drama, 28, 214; soliloquy in, 211–12
- English language: Arden on (his writing of), 216; Beckett on relation of, to other European languages, 138; Pinter on obscenity and, 188n; Shaw on (accents), 54n

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More information

Index

- Eumenides: in Eliot, 99, 119; in Giraudoux, 99
- Euripides: chorus from The Bacchae by, in Major Barbara, 49, 71
- Everyman*, 133; Eliot and, 3, 83, 91, 117
- existentialism: in Pinter, 171n; theology and, 135n
- expression: comedy and pathos of failure of, 16; as one pole of dramatic language, 13, 14
- expressionist plays, 133
- expressiveness: aesthetic, in implicit speech, 168; new kind of, in Pinter's theatre of language, 174; verbal, 2, 137
- farce, Victorian, 30, 148
- Fergusson, Francis, The Idea of a Theater by, 99, 229
- 'floating feelings', Eliot on, 94
- Forster, E. M., Howard's End by, 235
- fragments, aesthetics of, 144
- Fry, Christopher, The Dark is Light Enough by, 210
- Frye, Northrop: on archetypal masque, 132–3; on resources of verbal expression, 232–3
- Gardner, Helen, on Eliot, 107
- George, Stefan, Brecht on, 46
- Gide, André, on Dada, 80
- Gilbert, W. S., Iolanthe by, 104n
- Giraudoux, Jean, Eumenides in, 99
- Godard, J. L.: pastiche of Hollywood musicals in film by, 34
- Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von, Götz by, 227
- Goldsmith, Oliver, on style of Dr Johnson, 40
- Gombrich, E. H., on cultural resonance, 34
- Gorky, Maxim, Lower Depths by, 58
- gospels, the: dialogue in, 35–6, 37
- Harvey, J. B., on Beckett, 135
- Hayman, Ronald, on everyday conversation in Pinter, 168
- Hofmannsthal, Hugo von, 4–5
- Huizinga, Johan, Homo Ludens by, 177
- Hulme, T. E., influences Eliot, 90
- Ibsen, Henrik: Arden on, 215; classical naturalism in, 15, 17–18, 38, 53; The Doll's House by, 13, 56; duologue in, between a character and voices from illusory past, 117; Ghosts by, 110; Rosmersholm by, 17; Shaw on, 40, 55–6, 85
- idioms: in Pinter, 167; Shaw and, 48n
- illumination: moments of, in Eliot, 124, 126–8
- 'imaginary museum', see under museum
- Ionesco, Eugène, 61, 169; The Bald Primadonna by, 166
- Irish speech: Beckett's heritage from, 141, 154, 157; as Shaw's mother tongue, 52n; see also Synge, Yeats
- Jacobean drama, 28, 214, 236
- Jakobson, Roman, on 'private' language, 232, 241n, 249
- James, Henry: accepts ascendancy of language of imitation, 6, 7–8; dramatic attempts of, 5, 7, 40; exhaustion of artist in The Middle Years by, 231
- jargon, in Pinter, 167, 184n
- Joe Macbeth* (gangster film), 11
- John of the Cross, St, Eliot and, 124
- Johnson, Dr, Goldsmith on style of, 40
- Jonson, Ben, Shaw on Volpone by, 40
- Joyce, James, 4; Beckett on Finnegans Wake by, 138, 139n; Exiles by, 75; on Shaw, 75
- Jung, C. G., use of term persona by, 32n
- Kafka, Franz, The Trial by, 182
- Kenner, Hugh, on Eliot, 106
- Knight, Wilson, on 'Dionysian' speech from below, 200
- Koestler, Arthur: Darkness at Noon by, 181; on infolding of language, 25

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More informationIndex

- Kott, Jan, on King Lear, 24
- Lahr, John, on avant-garde theatre in USA, 231n
- Lamb, Charles, Specimens by, 33
- language, 8; as anaesthetic (Shaw), 83; as a barrier to communication, 22; crisis of, 1, 3–4, 26, 106; crisis of, as condition of creativity, 231; critical, progress from a limited language towards, 15, 20–2; ‘documented’, 36–7, 74, 193; of dramatic collage, 27–33, 71; exhausted, 92, 94; exhaustion not of language, but of particular writer in particular situation, 231; fragmented or minimal, 2; as gesture, 242; ‘infolding’ of, 25, 190, 233, 235; limited, of classical naturalism, 15–20, 29; a new dramatic, as a new combination of known styles, 34–5; non-verbal or anti-verbal, 8–13, 29, 230; opposition between written and spoken, 242; overtones and resonances of, 34; participatory and spectatorial, distinction between, 99–100; ‘private’, 131, 136, 232; re-mythologised, movement towards, 97; solipsistic, see solipsism; as sound (Sweeney Agonistes), 101; tension between spontaneity and design in, 175; as vision, 133; see also speech and dialogue
- language-consciousness, 2–4, 31–2, 232; of Arden, 30; of Eliot, 90, 97
- Lawrence, D. H., 188n
- Leavis, F. R., on Eliot’s poetry, 128
- Lévi-Strauss, Claude, bricoleur of, 34
- liturgy, in Eliot, 13, 15, 88, 89, 94, 97–108; formal, becomes an exhausted language, 94; intersection between naturalism and, 89; movement to naturalism from, 95, 96–7, 109, 115, 128; parodies or sanctifies everyday speech, 109
- Living Theatre, 10
- Lukács, Georg: on absence of confidants in new drama, 123; on the modern theatre of environment, 198; on the unspoken in dialogue, 28
- Lyndsay, Sir David, Thrie Estaitis by, 225
- lyricism, old-style: used by Beckett, 141–2, 152
- MacCarthy, Desmond, on Shaw, 71
- McCarthy, Mary, on Osborne, 196, 204
- Maeterlinck, Maurice, 133; Eliot and drama of, 87, 88, 98
- Mallarmé, Stéphane, 98n; on speech as no more than a commercial approach to reality, 22–3
- Malraux, André, and ‘Le musée imaginaire’, 28, 34
- Mann, Thomas, The Magic Mountain by, 81
- mannerism, 172; in Pinter, 172–4, 178, 182, 187
- Marcuse, Herbert, defends aesthetic form, 231n
- Marowitz, Charles, on the inarticulate, 25
- Mauthner, Fritz, Critique of Language by, 4
- meaning of meaning, for Beckett and for Pinter, 171
- mechanistic thought, parodies of (by Shaw, Beckett, Osborne), 199–200
- melodrama, Victorian, 30, 214; Arden and, 214; Eliot and, 104; Shaw and, 49, 57, 62
- Miller, Arthur: Arden on, 215; The Crucible by, 36; on mime, 10
- mime, 10–12
- Molière: Les précieuses ridicules by, 63; Shaw on, 41, 86
- monologue: dialogue in and out of (Beckett), 20, 131, 136, 153–

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More information

Index

- 64; in Osborne, 193, 194, 198;
see also soliloquy
- Moralities, medieval, 214
- Mummers' plays, 214
- museum, imaginary: of drama, 214;
 of possible languages, 1, 33; of speech, 34, 39, (Eliot and) 89–
 90, 111; of style, 5, 28, 44, 232,
 234; of style, as a mausoleum
 (Beckett), 137
- music: relation between poetry and (Eliot), 98n; relation between words and, 13–14; Pinter and,
 189–91 and n; see also Shaw
 (word-music)
- 'musicalising' of language, see
under Symbolism
- music hall, 30; Beckett's debt to,
 143; Eliot and, 88, 101, 104,
 233; 'folk art' of, in Osborne's
The Entertainer, 193, 206
- mysticism, 135; in Eliot, 3, 122,
 124, 126
- myths: in drama, 34; 're-mytholo-gising', 98–9
- National Theatre, couples Beckett's
Play with Sophocles, 153
- naturalism: bifurcation of Symbolism and (late 19th century), 15;
 classical, limited language of, 15–
 20, 29; Eliot's movement from liturgy to approximate, 95, 96–7, 109, 115, 128; as an exhausted style, 1, 2, 26; as one pole of dramatic language, 13, 14;
 Osborne thrusts histrionic rhetoric into, 192; persistent, of Osborne, 212; Pinter's man-nerism and, 173; Shaw's distance from, 38, 40, 53–62; survival of, in parody, 234–5, and in simplification to minimal speech, 235; upholders of, 5–8
- naturalist vision and non-naturalist language, in Shaw, 55–7, 63
 'negative way', of mystics, 124,
 135
- neurosis: energies of, in plays of Tennessee Williams, 193
- Nichols, Peter, plays of, 234
- Nietzsche, Friedrich, on revival of chorus as anti-naturalist, 98
- Noh plays, 234
- obscene language, Pinter on, 188n
- Ohmann, R. M.: on Shaw's non-dramatic prose, 45; Speech, Action, and Style by, 242–3
- Oh What a Lovely War*, theatrical collage, 37
- O'Neill, Eugene: Hughie by, 163;
Strange Interlude by, 162
- Osborne, John, 192–200, 202–4; his allegiance to words, 29, 204;
 Arden on, 215; comparison of
 Shaw and, 200–2; language of,
 192, 195; rhetoric in, 192, 193, 197, 200, 204–12; shifts of style in, 233; two play forms and two languages of, 194
A Bond Honoured, 194; author's
 note to, 195n
- Coriolanus* (projected play set in African republic), 198
- The Entertainer*, 193, 206, 208,
 210–11, 212; interplay between two modes of language in,
 194
- Epitaph for George Dillon*, 193, 195,
 205–6, 208, 209
- Inadmissible Evidence*, 207, 208–9,
 212; monologue in, 193, 198, 211
- Look Back in Anger*, 192, 208, 209–
 10; rhetoric of odium in, 201–2
- Luther*, 193, 202–4; interplay between two modes of language in,
 194
- A Patriot for Me*, 193
- Time Present*, 206–7, 212
- West of Suez*, 235
- Park, B. R., on Shaw, 45
- parody, 2, 33–4, 62–4; in Beckett, 141–2, 143; in Eliot, 92–3, 104;
 in Osborne, 193n, 195n; in

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More informationIndex

- parody (cont.)
 Shaw, 33, 39, 40, 64–73; in Stoppard, 33
 pastiche, 63, 64; in Pinter, 187; in Shaw, 69–70, 71, 72, 85
 Péguy, C. P., Le mystère de la charité de Jeanne d'Arc by, 107 persona, 31–2, 112
 philosophy, critical: analysis of abstract into no-sense by, 26
 Pinero, A. W.: accepts language of imitation, 5, 6, 7–8; defines spoken language, 54; on R. L. Stevenson as dramatist, 6–7
 Pinter, Harold, 165; Arden on, 215; his conception of 'unverifiable' action, 20; contrasted with Arden, 228, with Beckett, 137, 169–72, 190, and with Ionesco, 166; experiences language as a source of nausea and paralysis, 4, 231; increasing self-consciousness of, 173–4; language as a smoke-screen in, 20, 167, 180; mannerism in, 172–4, 178, 182, 187; obsessed with words, 165–8; Osborne on, 192, 193, 194n; recreates language for each new play, 173; shaping of dialogue by, 174–8; spectrum of styles in major plays of, 178–88; subtext in, 21–2; and 'tape-recording' ear, 53, 109
The Basement, 178
The Birthday Party, 13, 167, 170n; two styles in, 178–82
The Caretaker, 16, 167, 169–70; fusion of linguistic and psychological pattern in, 177, 182–4; pathologically inarticulate speech in, 25; structure of, 171
The Collection, 167, 170–1, 178
The Dumb Waiter, 167, 170n, 176–7
The Homecoming, 166, 167, 177–8; shifts of language in, 184–8; structure of, 171
Landscape, 25, 172, 178, 189–90
The Lover, 167, 178
Night, 188
Old Times, 167, 178; fusion of 'infolding' language and theatrical collage in, 233
The Room, 167, 170n, 173
Silence, 25, 172, 178, 190
A Slight Ache, 167
The Tea Party, 178
Writing for the Theatre (article), 174–5
 Pirandello, Luigi: modern theatricality in, 28; Six Characters in Search of an Author by, 18, 110; on spoken action, 18, 54 poetry, should help to prevent language from changing too rapidly (Eliot), 129
 Pound, Ezra, 64, 98n; ABC of Reading by, 230; and Eliot, 106
 Pre-Raphaelites, Shaw and, 43
 Proust, Marcel, Beckett on, 131, 133, 139n purgatory, as recurrent metaphor in Beckett, 139n radio plays, 101; Beckett's, 152, 158, 188; see also Cascando, under Beckett revue sketches, Pinter's, 175–6 rhetoric, 2, 32; in Eliot, 88n, 96; in Osborne, 192, 193, 197, 200, 201, 204–12; in politics, 31; in Shakespeare, 28, 88; in Shaw, 74, 75, 80, 83, 84; straight line of, in Shaw, 47
 rhythm, Eliot and the idea of, 109
 Rimbaud, Arthur, proclaims need for language of the soul, 22 ritual: and liturgy, in Eliot, 97–108; in Pinter, 177, 181–2 ritual drama, in Shaw, 48–9, 74; see also M. Morgan, 58n role-enactment: language in, 31; parody in, 64
 Rostand, Edmond, Cyrano de Bergerac by, 88, 205
 Rudkin, David, use of West Midland dialects by, 26–7
 Saporta, Sol, on 'linguistic features' and context, 240

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More information

Index

- Sardou, Victorien, Shaw and, 5, 72
- Sartre, Jean-Paul: Huis Clos by, 131;
La Nausée by, 210
- Schiller, Friedrich, definition of 'naive' by, 18, 46, 89
- Shakespeare, William: Arden invokes, 228; Beckett's allusions to, 144, 145, 146, 149; blank verse of, 92, 234; Eliot on, 88, 96; Eliot emulates final reconciliation scenes in, 125; leaves an image of wholeness, 229; modes of language used by, 3n, 216; Shaw on, 40, 51–3
- Antony and Cleopatra*, Shaw on, 52n
- Hamlet*, 11, 28, 110, 242
- King Lear*, 52, 234, 240–1; Poor Tom's language in, 24
- Macbeth*, un-mimable passage of, 11
- A Midsummer Night's Dream*, interplay of styles in, 28, 63
- Othello*, 186
- Romeo and Juliet*, Eliot's analysis of balcony scene in, 116
- Shaw, G. B., 38–40; the absurd in, 5, 50, 75–84; use of word 'absurd' by, 50n, 84–6; comedy of ideas in, 87; comparison of Osborne and, 200–2; his distance from naturalism, 40, 53–62; Eliot on, 87, 88n; on the gospel narrative, 36; hyperarticulateness of, 19, 38, 66, 81, 84; 'naive' and robust creativity of, 5; operatic approach to drama by, 13, 19, 40, 47, 49, 52, 53, 60–1, 72; parody and pastiche in, 33, 39, 40, 62–73; his propaganda on behalf of the published text of a play, 29; and Romeo, 117n; 'style' (ambiguities of) 41–7, (shifts in), 39, 58, 61–2, 75, 233; the theatre as temple for, 47–9; on theatricality of public and private life, 31, 74n; (Raymond) Williams on, 238; and word-music, 13, 49–53; Yeats on, 46, 51
- The Apple Cart*, 49, 55n, 72
- Arms and the Man*, 41, 62; parody in, 65–6
- Back to Metbuselah*: analogy to Wagner's Ring cycle in, 49; Automata in, 43, 77–9, 85; Automata as parody of mechanistic thought, 199, 200; pastiche in, 69, 70; postscript to, 86; preface to, 75n; speculative rhetoric in, 62; Speech-maker in, 76–7
- Candida*, 43n, 55n
- Caesar and Cleopatra*, 72
- The Dark Lady of the Sonnets*, 52n
- The Doctor's Dilemma*, 85; pastiche in, 69, 70, 71
- Don Juan in Hell*, 50; conscious self-parody in, 67–8, 69, 70
- Geneva, 83
- Getting Married*, 51
- In Good King Charles's Golden Days*, 47, 83
- Heartbreak House*, 52, 76; contrasts of natural and posed expression in, 59–61; interplay between voices of 'reality' and 'fantasy' in, 45; pastiche in, 69, 70, 71; supposed Chekhovian elements in, 56
- John Bull's Other Island*, 44n, 55n, 71, 76
- Major Barbara*, 13, 50, 76; chorus from Euripides in, 49, 71; superficial naturalism and melodramatic stage-Cockney in, 58–9; use of Bunyan's prose style in, 44, 70, 76
- The Man of Destiny*, 72
- Man and Superman*: the absurd in, 76, 85; conscious self-parody in, 45, 66–8, 69, 70; lower-class speech in, 55n; preface to, 42–3, 48, 67n; rhetoric in, 50, 201
- Mrs Warren's Profession*, 49, 57
- The Music Cure*, 86
- Music in London* (articles), 50n
- Pygmalion*, 78; Doolittle's speech in, 54–5

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More informationIndex

- Shaw, G. B. (cont.)
The Quintessence of Ibsenism (essay), 55
Saint Joan, 36, 50, 202–3; collage of styles in, 45, 72–4; mystic voices in, 49, 226
Shakes versus Shaw (puppet play), 52–3
The Showing up of Blanco Posnet, 75
Too True to be Good, 80–3, 84, 85
Translations and Tomfooleries, 86
Village Wooing, 61–2
Widowers' Houses, 41, 57
You Never Can Tell, 38
- Shelley, Percy B., pastiche-Jacobean in The Cenci by, 33
- Sheridan, Richard B., patterned speech in plays of, 64
- silences, in Pinter's plays, 172, 190
- Smith, Grover, on Eliot, 93
- Smith, J. Percy, on Shaw's 'ritual drama', 48
- socialism, Osborne on dramatist's approach to, 196
- society, Osborne on fragmentation of, 197
- soliloquy: in Arden, 223; in Elizabethan dramatists, 211–12; see also monologue
- solipsism in language, 30; Beckett's acceptance of, 131; Eliot's attempt to avoid, 123; externalised form of, in Osborne, 198; and language of tribe, 232
- solitude: world of perpetual, in Eliot's poetry and Beckett's plays, 123, 130–2
- Sophocles: Eliot emulates conclusion of Oedipus at Colonus by, 125; first to increase number of actors to three, 153
- speech, 8; as action (Shaw), 38; -of-appearance, 31, 110, 112, 113, 119; 'costume', 32, 54, 63, 72, 193; dehumanised (Pinter), 177, 185, 187; disjunction of action and, 20, 22; gap between communication and, 112, 168; imaginary museum of, see museum; lower-class, in Eliot, 26, 108, 109, 110–16, and in Shaw, 55n, 58; natural, raised to dramatic poetry, 116, 118; opposition between written language and, 242; ordinary, Eliot's horror at meaninglessness of, 109; ordinary, literary debris in, 27; parody of ordinary, 2, 110; pathological breakdown of (Waiting for Godot), 139–40; pathologically inarticulate, 24–5, 76; see also language
- spoken action (Pirandello), 18, 54
- Stanislavski, Constantin: Building a Character by, 20; his 'production score' for The Seagull, 21
- stasis, dramatic: in Beckett, 47, 131
- Steiner, George, on pastiche in Shelley, 33n; linguistics and poetics, 239n
- Stevenson, R. L., as dramatist: Pintero on, 6–7
- Storey, David, 234; Home by, 235
- Stravinsky, Igor, 34, 101n
- Strindberg, August, 192, 195; pantomime in Miss Julie by, 11
- structuralism, in study of drama, 241–2
- Styan, J. L., The Elements of Drama by, 120, 242
- style: imaginary museum of, see museum; montage of several different kinds of, 33; Shaw's idea of inward relation between 'conviction' and, 43, 44–5, 47n–48n
- stylistics, and dramatic criticism, xii–xiii, 238–42; see also criticism
- subtext (interaction of text and context), 20–2, 95; in Chekhov, 61; in Pinter, 174
- Swift, Jonathan, Shaw on, 85–6
- Swinburne, Algernon, 98n
- Symbolism: Beckett's heritage from, 141; bifurcation of naturalism and (late 19th century), 15; distrust of public functions of

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-09866-3 - Six Dramatists in Search of a Language: Studies in Dramatic Language

Andrew K. Kennedy

Index

More information

Index

- language in, 22–3; idea of ‘musicalising’ language in, 13, 47, 98, 109, 191
- Synge, J. M., 53, 228n; Arden compared with, 214; on Ibsen’s language, 18; preface to The Playboy of the Western World by, 26
- Taylor, Tom, Jeanne Darc by, 73n
- Te Deum*, 74, 105
- telephone, as instrument of anti-communication in Eliot, 110–11, 177
- television plays, Pinter’s, 173, 178
- theatre: of the Absurd, 86; of environment (Lukács), 198; epic, of Brecht, 28; of happenings, Osborne’s attacks on, 29; interaction of, with public life, 30; of language, 4, 174; non-verbal or anti-verbal, 230; of parables (Shaw), 70n, 77; popular, Arden and, 213; as temple, for Shaw, 47–8; in the theatre (Pirandello), 28
- theatricality, 27–33; of public and private life (Shaw), 31, 74n; of Shaw, 40, 45; verbal, as a critical language, 33; verbal, difference between spoken action and, 54
- Thomas, Dylan, Under Milk Wood by, 157
- Tourneur, Cyril, The Revenger’s Tragedy by, 94n
- translation: of idiom (Pinter) 167n, (Shaw) 48n; of today into terms of poetry (Arden), 216, 217–18
- unsayable, the: Eliot’s effort to reach, 19, 21n, 96, 104, 123–8; Rimbaud’s quest for, 22
- Valéry, Paul, 22n; on Pascal, 30–1
- Vannier, Jean, on Beckett and Ionesco, 168–9
- verbal analysis, see criticism
- verbal games, in Pinter, 169, 173, 178
- verbalism, of Beckett, 133
- Verlaine, Paul, Art Poétique by, 191
- verse: Eliot on plays in, 121n; speaking in, as an oracular pronouncement (Arden), 221
- Vico, Gian Battista: on language in Scienza Nuova (1725), 90; on language-cycle, 138
- Wagner, Richard: Shaw on, 50n, 52; words of Tristan und Isolde by, 98
- Walker, Roy, on Beckett, 162
- Watling, E. F., on three dimensional drama of Sophocles, 153
- Weil, Simone, on implicit love, 121
- Weiss, Peter, The Investigation by, 36–7, 218n
- Wesker, Arnold: Arden on, 215; non-verbal demonstrations in plays of, 12
- Wilde, Oscar, patterned speech in plays of, 64, 111
- Williams, Raymond, criticism of drama by, 21, 237–8
- Williams, Tennessee, energies of neurosis in plays of, 193
- Wilson, Edmund, criticism of drama by, 15, 72
- Wittgenstein, Ludwig, 26; on ‘private’ language, 136n, 232
- Woolf, Virginia, The Waves by, 191
- word-music: in Eliot, 96; Shaw and, 5, 13, 49–53
- Wordsworth, William, and ballads, 213–14
- world war I: Gide and, 80; Shaw and, 75–6, 81–2
- Worth, Katherine J., compares Shaw and Osborne, 200
- Yeats, W. B.: early drama of, 98; Eliot on, 99; Essays and Introductions by, 23–4; Explorations by, 4, 213, 214; pins hopes for drama on naive naturalist, 27; Purgatory by, 127; on Shaw, 46, 51; uses Noh plays, 234; withdraws from public theatre, 128