This volume is dedicated to the memory of JAMES THORNTON who died in 1969, Director of the London Branch of the Calouste Gulbenkian Foundation of Lisbon. The studies at Cambridge which gave rise to these published results for England were first supported by the Foundation when Mr Thornton was its Director. The international interchange at which many of the papers were read in September 1969 also took place under the Foundation's patronage. Mr Thornton showed a remarkable understanding of a new branch of learning in the process of coming into being.
