ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

My chief debts are to Professors A. Walton Litz of Princeton University and Donald Greene of the University of Southern California, both of whom encouraged me to do this book, graciously read my introductory essay in manuscript, and made many useful suggestions for its improvement. Professors Andrew Wright of the University of California, San Diego, and Alistair M. Duckworth of the University of Florida also read my introductory essay in manuscript, and I am grateful to them as well for their kindness in doing so and for their sound critical advice.

I should like to express my appreciation to Mr Jonathan H. Price and the Clarendon Press, Oxford, for allowing me to see uncorrected proof sheets of B. C. Southam's essay on Jane Austen published in the volume edited by A.E. Dyson, The English Novel: Select Bibliographical Guides, which was going through the press as I was compiling the select bibliography which appears at the back of this book.

I am also indebted to the College of Letters, Arts and Sciences of the University of Southern California for a grant from its research and publication fund in support of the preparation of this book for the press.
