CATHOLICISM IN THE ENGLISH PROTESTANT IMAGINATION

Nationalism, Religion, and Literature, 1660–1745

This study examines the role of anti-Catholic rhetoric in late seventeenth- and early eighteenth-century England. This role was long neglected, being at once obvious and distasteful, a reproach to the heirs of the Enlightenment who prided themselves on their tolerance and did not want to confront its origins in intolerance. Raymond Tumbleson discusses how the fear of Popery, a potentially destabilizing force under the Stuarts, ultimately became a principal guarantor of the Hanoverian oligarchy. The range of authors discussed runs from Middleton, Milton, and Marvell to Swift, Defoe, and Fielding, as well as numerous pamphleteers. Crossing traditional generic, disciplinary, and chronological boundaries, this book examines hitherto neglected relationships between poetry and prose, literature and polemic, the Reformation and the Augustan age.

Raymond D. Tumbleson is Assistant Professor of English at Kutztown University, Pennsylvania. He has published articles in journals including Literature/Film Quarterly, Journal of the History of Ideas, Genre, Studies in the Novel, Persuasions, and Prose Studies.
