Acknowledgments

I would like to thank Wilbur Hass, my first psycholinguistics professor, for telling me the name of the phenomenon I was interested in, and Charles Osgood for providing a congenial situation to pursue the interest and for continuing moral support. I am grateful to Tom Roeper, Bill Brewer, Janellen Huttenlocher, Lance Rips, Eve Clark, and Jill de Villiers for helpful discussions and comments at various stages of the enterprise. I benefited enormously from the careful reading and detailed comments of Charles Fillmore and Lise Menn. And I especially thank my advisor, David McNeill, for his advice and patient encouragement.

The project that was begun at the University of Chicago and carried out at the University of Illinois underwent its final revisions at the University of Arizona. Having thanked my friends and teachers at the former institutions, I would also like to acknowledge the support of my friends and colleagues at the current one: Susan Philips, Adrian Akmajian, Keith and Adrienne Lehrer, Ken and Yetta Goodman, Lon Wheeler, Neil Bartlett.

The encouragement of several other people was immeasurably helpful to me across the time in Chicago, Champaign, and Tucson. I would like to express my gratitude to them: Henry and Renee Tanz, Jane Stevens, and Fritz Larsen.
