

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-10341-1 - The French Economy in the Nineteenth Century: An Essay in Econometric Analysis

Maurice Levy-Leboyer and Francois Bourguignon

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

Preface	page xiii
Introduction	1
Part I Historical hypotheses	15
Introduction	17
1 Consumption	27
Food consumption	28
Engel's law	32
Determinants of consumption	41
2 International competition	47
The slump in exports	50
Capital-labour substitution	57
Structural dualism	66
3 Investment	73
The diversion of savings	82
The economic recovery and recourse to the capital market	93
Conclusion: the French problem	105
Part II Econometric analysis	109
4 Theoretical framework of estimation	111
A simple two-sector growth model	112
The complete model: short-run rigidities, foreign trade and money	125
Final remarks	136
Appendix	137
	ix

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-10341-1 - The French Economy in the Nineteenth Century: An Essay in Econometric Analysis

Maurice Levy-Leboyer and Francois Bourguignon

Table of Contents

More information

x	Contents
5	Estimated behavioural functions	142
	The fundamental macroeconomic mechanisms and their evolution over the century	143
	Consumption	143
	Foreign trade	159
	The functioning of the agricultural market:
	output, price and imports	171
	Price, supply and wages in the non-agricultural sector	179
	Investment behaviour in the non-agricultural sector	187
	Interest rate	191
	Our conclusions thus far	194
	Appendix	197
6	A few simulations of the economy in the nineteenth century	205
	Testing the model's overall performance with a reference simulation	206
	Simulation of the role of some exogenous factors in the short- and long-run evolution of the French economy	220
	The role of the agricultural sector	222
	The role of the international environment and protectionism	231
	The domestic market	247
	Conclusion	252
	Appendix	255
	Appendix: base series	257
	Introduction	257
	National product	257
	The question of the upward revision of old series	259
	The sub-series: agriculture, industry and services	263
	Summary	270
	Capital formation	273
	Investment sub-series	280
	Additional series	287
	The work force and labour productivity	292
	Money, economic conditions and markets	301
	Money and the capital market	301
	Economic conditions	308
	Statistical series	311

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-10341-1 - The French Economy in the Nineteenth Century: An Essay in Econometric Analysis

Maurice Levy-Leboyer and Francois Bourguignon

Table of Contents

More information

---

Contents	xi
Notes	342
Bibliography	359
Index	362