ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The fieldwork in Kenya (chapters 2 to 6) was funded by the British Academy, the Sir Ernest Cassel Educational Trust, and Leeds University. A research permit (Ref: OP.13/001/c 1977/16) granted by the Office of the President, Nairobi, made the work possible. Help in Kenya was provided by Richard Leakey, the National Museum, Nairobi, and the British Institute in Eastern Africa. My special thanks to Mary, Matthew, Dave, Lucia and Sami for supporting me in the field.

The Zambian work (chapter 7) was funded by the British Academy and the University of Leeds, and was made possible by the cordial aid of the Permanent Secretary, Western Province, Zambia. Gwyn and Miriam Prins, Lindsay and Austin Sedgley provided essential help in Zambia.

The research in Sudan (chapter 8) was funded by the Social Science Research Council. Official permission and assistance in Khartoum were provided by the National Council for Research, the Board of Anthropology, N. M. Sherif, the Director General of Antiquities, and A. Mohd Ali Hakem, Department of Archaeology, University of Khartoum. Guiding me through the formalities, Khidr Ahmed provided invaluable help, as did Else and Arvid Kleppe and Paul Callow. Thanks most sincerely to Mary, Jane, Andy and Sami for putting up with me in the field and for so willingly collecting so much of the nonsense I wanted.

Richard Bradley, Linda Donley, James Faris, Danny Miller, Henrietta Moore, Paul Spencer, Chris Tilley and Owen Wheatley read all or various parts of the typescript and the final draft has taken account of their criticisms. An article similar to chapter 2 has been published in D. Green, C. Haselgrove and M. Spriggs (eds.) Social organisation and settlement, British Archaeological Report, 1978, and the pottery section of chapter 3 is published in M. Millett (ed.) Pottery and the archaeologist, Institute of Archaeology, London, 1979. Chapter 7 is an expansion of parts of a paper published in I. Hodder, G. Isaac and N. Hammond (eds.) Pattern of the past, Cambridge University Press, 1981. The section on burial in chapter 9 is developed from an article published in P. Rahtz, T. Dickinson and L. Watts (eds.) Anglo-Saxon cemeteries 1979, British Archaeological Report, 1980.

More informationx Acknowledgements

Most of the photographs were taken by Sami Karkabi, Ministry of Tourism, Beirut, who accompanied me in all the fieldwork except that in Zambia. I am extremely grateful to him for his patience and care and am only sorry that more of his excellent photographs could not be included in this book.

I must also thank my Cambridge students from whom I have learnt so much. Many of the ideas in chapters 9 and 10 grew out of frequent and intense seminars in the academic year 1979–80, and it is no longer possible to know from whom the ideas originated. My debt to the members of the group, whose own work will be published, is immense.

It is difficult for me fully to appreciate how much this book owes to Françoise. It was she who took me to Baringo in the first place and started the whole thing off. Her practical sense in the field (Baringo and Zambia), and her patience and criticism at home provide the bases and framework on which the research is built.
