- 1 Introduction 1
 'Old' archaeological visions of the past 1
 'New' archaeological visions of the past 6
 Goodness of fit and deductive research 8
 The interpretation/explanation distinction and its relation to building acceptable anthropological theory 12
 Desert big men and risk reduction for all 13
 More about the book and its ecological-systemic approach 16
 The model of prehistoric adaptation and adaptive change 19
- 2 A model for aboriginal adaptation and adaptive change 22
 Adaptive problems and solutions under low human density 24
 Adaptive problems under continuously increasing human densities 30
 Settlement and subsistence 33
 Intensified gathering 34
 Hunting intensification 36
 Supplementary horticulture 37
 Labor organization 40
 Social organization and land tenure 43
 General expectations 47
- 3 Environmental and ethnographic descriptions of the study area 51
 Southwestern environmental characteristics 51
 Apachean adaptations in the study area 56
 The ethnographic record and the model 58
- 4 The factor analyses 60
 The artifactual data 63
 R1: R mode factor analysis of 23 site assemblages 63
 Factor 1 63
 Factor 2 65
 Factor scores 66
 Factor 3 66
 R2: R mode factor analysis of 46 house assemblages 67
 Factor 1 68
 Factor 2 69
