
CONTENTS

Abbreviated references to Schenker's writings	page ix
Preface	xi
HISTORICAL STUDIES
Introduction	1
Schenkerian theory and manuscript studies: modes of interaction John Rothgeb	4
A source for Schenker's study of thorough bass: his annotated copy of J. S. Bach's Generalbassbüchlein Hedi Siegel	15
Music and morphology: Goethe's influence on Schenker's thought William Pastille	29
Schenkerian theory and the analysis of Renaissance music David Stern	45
Foreground, middleground, and background: their significance in the history of tonality Saul Novack	60
ANALYTICAL STUDIES
Introduction	73
Dual-key movements David Loeb	76
J. S. Bach's "binary" dance movements: form and voice leading Larry Laskowski	84
Aspects of the Neapolitan sixth chord in Mozart's music Roger Kamien	94
Enharmonic transformation in the first movement of Mozart's Piano Concerto in C minor, K. 491 Eric Wen	107
Schenker and chromatic tonicization: a reappraisal Patrick McCreless	125

Contents

Departures from the norm in two songs from Schumann's Liederkreis Charles Burkhart	146
Either/or Carl Schachter	165
SCHENKER STUDIES TODAY
Introduction	181
Schenkerian theory in Great Britain: developments and responses Jonathan Dunsby with a select bibliography of literature related to Schenker by British authors or in British publications since 1980 compiled by John Rink	182
The Americanization of Heinrich Schenker William Rothstein	193
Index	204