INDEX

The names of the authors of secondary works are indexed when they appear in the text and the notes. Because the titles of their books and articles are indexed only when they appear in the notes, the first page cited gives the full bibliographical reference.

Although a distinction between Chaucer as poet and Chaucer as narrator is attempted here, it is somewhat artificial, and therefore not perfectly maintained. (See entry for “Geoffrey the pilgrim and Chaucer the poet, indistinguishability of.”) The distinction between other pilgrims as characters and as narrators is also imperfect; they are indexed under their titles (for example, Parson or Knight) or under the main heading “narrators.”
