ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to acknowledge the encouragement and helpful criticism of colleagues and friends who discussed this project with me in the various stages of its writing. Thanks go to my associates at Miami University who read and commented on several chapters of the book, Jim Creech, Jane Gallop, Peggy Kamuf and especially to Marie-Claire Vallois and Mitchell Greenberg for their attentive readings of the entire manuscript and for their warm support. I also wish to express my gratitude to Ross Chambers for his interest in this book and for his generous endorsement of my work in past years. Janet Mercer's unflinching cooperation in typing various versions of these chapters is also acknowledged gratefully. Finally, my wife Betsy assisted me in so many ways, from helpful discussions of my arguments to insightful readings of each chapter; she has been a constant advisor and critic.

GENERAL EDITOR'S PREFACE

This series aims at providing a new forum for the discussion of major critical or scholarly topics within the field of French studies. It differs from most similar-seeming ventures in the degree of freedom which contributing authors are allowed and in the range of subjects covered. For the series is not concerned to promote any single area of academic specialisation or any single theoretical approach. Authors are invited to address themselves to problems, and to argue their solutions in whatever terms seem best able to produce an incisive and cogent account of the matter in hand. The search for such terms will sometimes involve the crossing of boundaries between familiar academic disciplines, or the calling of those boundaries into dispute. Most of the studies will be written especially for the series, although from time to time it will also provide new editions of outstanding works which were previously out of print, or originally published in languages other than English or French.
