PREFACE

Along with our contributors and his many colleagues and friends, we congratulate Matthew Black on attaining his seventieth birthday and offer to him this volume in token of our gratitude and esteem. In his long career as a scholar, culminating in more than twenty years as Principal of St Mary's College in the University of St Andrews, he has served church and university, contributing a wide knowledge and a wise judgment to both. Many scholars have learned from him the beginnings of their trade. Others have been generously encouraged and guided when they presented their papers to him as Editor of New Testament Studies. Under his direction this journal has reached a pre-eminent position and he has thereby made a major contribution to the advancement of New Testament scholarship. He has made another such contribution as one of the editors of the United Bible Societies' text of the New Testament; many of the articles in this volume are a tribute to his interest in this area. It would easily have been possible to choose other areas where he has left his mark on scholarship. A doughty opponent in discussion, a genial friend, a generous encourager of the scholarship of others, a devout Christian, he has now retired from his editorial chair and is about to retire as Principal. We trust that this will leave him free to continue to make his own personal contribution to the study of the New Testament and its related disciplines.
