

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-13447-7 - Thinking About Children: Sociology and Fertility in Post-War England

Joan Busfield and Michael Paddon

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

Preface	page ix
1 Introduction	1
I The demographic changes	4
II Demographic change and family life	14
Part I: The theoretical debate	19
2 Malthusian theories of population	21
I Malthus	21
II A contemporary adaptation	25
3 Utilitarian theories of fertility	32
I The foundations	34
II Testing the predictions	35
III Castles in the air	40
4 The foundations for a theory	47
Part II: Research design	57
5 A natural history of the research	59
I The context and origins of the research	60
II Preliminaries	63
III The pilot study	65
IV The survey	71
6 A chapter of errors	81
I Exploring the problem	82
II Developing the questionnaire	84
III Sampling	86
IV Interviewing and data analysis	92
V Laying the blame	95
7 Survey research	97
I Survey procedures and empirical generalisation	98
II Survey data	105

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-13447-7 - Thinking About Children: Sociology and Fertility in Post-War England

Joan Busfield and Michael Paddon

Table of Contents

More informationviii Contents

Part III: Marriage and childbearing in post-war England	111
8 Marriage	113
I The pressure to marry	116
II The material and financial demands of marriage	125
9 Thinking about children	133
I Becoming a parent	133
II Family size	142
III The timing of childbearing	154
IV The nature of the calculations	159
10 Images of family life	163
I The collective life	164
II The material life	171
III The better life	179
IV The active life	187
V The quiet life	194
VI Contrasting implications	200
11 Uncertainty, negotiation and change	204
I Uncertainty and change	204
II Negotiation	211
III A case study of the dynamics of family building	216
12 Controlling births	225
I The role of contraception	225
II Knowledge of contraception	235
III The acceptability of contraception	242
13 Trends in family size and spacing	250
Appendix A: The samples	259
I The pilot sample	259
II The survey sample	260
Appendix B: Interview Schedule for the Pilot Study	264
References	281
Index	306