

CONTENTS

Editor's Note	page vii
Introduction	ix
Obituary Notice by Sir Frederic Bartlett, F.R.S.	xiii
PART I. ANALYTICAL AND CAUSAL TREATMENTS OF PERCEPTION (Epilogue from the Ph.D. thesis)	I
PART II. THE MECHANISM OF HUMAN ACTION	7
1 Introductory	9
2 Principles of automatic regulation and servo-mechanisms	23
3 Review of synthetic principles and their application to living systems	32
4 Brain mechanisms: levels	38
5 Cyclical action in men and machinery	54
6 On human behaviour	71
PART III. EXPERIMENTAL WORK	91
7 Anderson Stuart's Contrast phenomenon	93
8 Brightness, discrimination, borders, and subjective brightness	94
9 On the effects of looking at the sun	98
10 Localized aniseikonia following 'eclipse blindness'	102
11 Correspondence regarding amblyopia	104
12 The photochemical stimulation of the optic nerve	106
13 Theories on dark-adaptation	112
14 Introspections on learning the Link Trainer by a mixed visual and instrument method	114
PART IV. SENSORY QUANTIFICATION	117
15 Crawford's results in binocular summation (unpublished)	119
16 Measurability of sensation	121
17 In defence of the measurability of sensation-intensity	124
18 Quantitative estimates of sensory events	126
19 On the question of sensation scales	131

CONTENTS

PART V. ASPECTS OF PSYCHOLOGY	page 137
20 Lectures on psychology for medical students	139
21 The nature of animal behaviour	143
22 Laws of association	144
23 Psychological effects of the black-out	145
PART VI. PHILOSOPHY	149
24 The nature of explanation—reply to critics	151
25 Causes and purposes	153
26 Man’s extension of himself	156
27 On the working of the mind	159
26 On the inductive study of language and the meaning of particular words	165
29 Induction, coherence, relational systems, and the objective validity of thought	167
30 Life	170
31 Claustrophobia	171
32 ‘The Marxist Philosophy and the Sciences’	172
33 Disagreement	174
34 War as a part of life	176
35 Songs of creation	178
Bibliography of the Writings of K. J. W. Craik	179
References	182