

Contents

INTRODUCTION page vii

The poet's craft and the art of drama

I	SHAKESPEARE, POET OF NATURE	1
	The pedant's creativity	3
	The arts of language	6
	Poetic structure and genre	14
	Major form and invention	20
II	ACTING AND DRAMA	28
	Hamlet and Ben Jonson	29
	Dramatic mimesis and the audience	33
	The art of acting	39
	The purposes of drama	43
III	SHAKESPEARE AND HIS AUDIENCE	52
	The presentational theatre	54
	The representational theatre	60
	The theatre of multiple response	64
	The spectator's creative participation	71

Language, creativity, myth, art, and nature

IV	SHAKESPEARE, MONTAIGNE, AND BACON	79
	Montaigne and the imagination	81
	Montaigne's poetics	83

vi	Contents
	Bacon's poetics	87
	Bacon and myth	90
V	THE DISMANTLING OF ESSENTIALIST DISCOURSE	97
	From "truth's simplicity" to sophistry	98
	The "madness of discourse"	101
	The relativity of language	106
	Contemporary analogues	111
VI	THE LANGUAGE OF POETRY	118
	"Apollo's lute, strung with his hair"	121
	Shakespeare's "Inverted Platonism"	126
	"Dumb thoughts, speaking in effect"	128
	The "tongue-tied muse"	132
VII	THE POETIC IMAGINATION	136
	"Chimeras and fantastic monsters"	137
	The poet's unplatonic frenzies	138
	The creative process	141
	Poet lunatics	144
VIII	MYTHOPOETICS	151
	Mythology, witchcraft, magic	151
	Shakespeare's dramatizations of the supernatural	156
	The supernatural: hallucination or reality?	160
	Mythopoeic creativity	164
IX	TIME'S ARGUMENT, OR ART AND NATURE	174
	Cyclical time and timelessness	174
	From tragedy to romance	178
	The poetics of cyclical return	181
	An "art that nature makes"	187
	CONCLUSION	198
	Notes	201
	Bibliography	236
	Index	255