

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-13645-7 - Psychology and the Political Experience

Alan Hughes

Frontmatter

More information

Psychology and the political experience

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-13645-7 - Psychology and the Political Experience
Alan Hughes
Frontmatter
More information

Psychology and the Political Experience

ALAN HUGHES

Senior Lecturer in Political Sociology University of Melbourne

Cambridge University Press

Cambridge University Press
978-0-521-13645-7 - Psychology and the Political Experience
Alan Hughes
Frontmatter
More information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town, Singapore,
São Paulo, Delhi, Dubai, Tokyo

Cambridge University Press
The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 8RU, UK

Published in the United States of America by Cambridge University Press, New York

www.cambridge.org
Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9780521136457

© Cambridge University Press 1975

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 1975
This digitally printed version 2010

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Catalogue Card Number: 74-12961

ISBN 978-0-521-20594-8 Hardback
ISBN 978-0-521-13645-7 Paperback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is,
or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-13645-7 - Psychology and the Political Experience

Alan Hughes

Frontmatter

More information

For Hans and Sophie Scholl,
and the men and women of 20 July 1944;
especially, Claus, Count Schenk von Stauffenberg

INVICTIS PAX

Contents

	page
Preface	ix
1 Introduction: psychology and politics	1
2 The political context	13
3 Authoritarian orientation and alienation: some previous research	29
4 Problems and solutions in measuring psychological dispositions	42
5 Dispositions and their correlates	68
6 The structure of political attitudes	100
7 Psychological dispositions and political attitudes	126
8 Political conversation in a small group	150
9 Conclusion; the psychology of Nazism	164
Appendices
A The sample and method of interviewing	177
B A brief statistical guide	181
C Constructing the scales for authoritarianism, ethnocentrism and alienation	185
D Constructing the political scales	198
E Dispositional scales and agreement tendency: how far has research been corrupted?	201
Bibliography	207
Index	215

Preface

This study of psychological dispositions and their interrelations with political attitudes is both theoretical and empirical. In its first aspect, it dwells on themes general to advanced industrial societies; the empirical investigation is located in urban Australia.

It has had many sources of guidance, but my gratitude goes first to Professor Alan Davies and Dr Frank Knöpfelmacher of the University of Melbourne, and to Mr Talis Polis, of La Trobe University, who each, in their, shall I say, very different ways, inspired my interest in this enterprise. My thanks also go to the supervisors of my doctoral thesis at the Australian National University, Dr Don Aitkin, Professor Robert Parker and Mr Michael Kahan, for their sustained encouragement in many improbable vicissitudes. Mr David Bottomley and Mr Irving Saulwick, of the Australian Sales Research Bureau, undertook the interviewing reported in the principal survey, at cost (or possibly beneath it) and deserve my acknowledgement of their generosity to academic research.

I owe much to the friendly assistance of Dr Ken Forster, of Monash University, Miss Mary Rose, of the Australian National University, and Mr Beau Sheil, of the University of Sydney.

Most of all, my gratitude goes to my wife, Wendy, without whose support this work could not have been completed.

Melbourne, 1974

ALAN HUGHES