

Contents

Preface	page xi
List of abbreviations	xii
Introduction: survey of research to date and delineation of study area	1
1 Literary and social conditions for the rise, distribution and textual structure of the street ballad	13
1.1 Performance and rendition	13
1.2 Position of the street ballad within the contemporary sphere of literary activity	17
1.2.1 Printing production, and street ballads as ‘wares’	18
1.2.2 Social and economic status of the ballad writer and singer/seller	21
1.2.3 Censorship and public taste	23
1.3 Relationship of texts to social and cultural context	26
2 Preliminary investigation of the interrelation between street-ballad text and socio-cultural environment; description of textual structure	28
2.1 A literary and sociological communication model for the socio-cultural placing of the street ballad	28
2.2 Speech-act theory and the interrelation between street-ballad text, situational context and components relating to socio-cultural conditions: textual structure and functional role	32
2.3 Communication levels in the street ballad	35
3 Procedures of the presenter and his relationship to his audience	39
3.1 Definition	39
3.2 The presenter’s reference to self	41
3.2.1 Speaker-related information	41
3.2.2 Establishment of a reception area for performance which is also relevant to the listeners	44
3.2.3 Personalization of the message	45
3.3 The presenter’s appeals to the listener	54

viii	Contents
3.3.1	Forms of address: of a general kind; specific address relevant to topic; early forms of address	54
3.3.2	Encouragement of the audience to immediate action during the performance: requests to come closer, listen, join in the singing and buy	59
3.3.3	Exhortation to the audience to change their attitude and behave differently in future: warning and advice	64
3.3.4	Use of the colloquial element as a form of audience approach	74
3.3.5	The refrain: an appeal factor for creating a sense of community	76
3.4	The presenter's reference to the outside world	80
3.4.1	The street-ballad 'trailer': metatextual advance information and advertising technique	80
3.4.2	The presenter's use of linguistic markers for the display of his subject	90
3.4.3	Reference to other street ballads (the 'answer ballad'): plurality of opinion and advertising techniques	95
3.5	Summary	97
3.5.1	The presenter's procedures as specific to the street ballad	97
3.5.2	Literary integration of advertising techniques in the street ballad	99
3.5.3	Virtual absence of the presenter in the early street ballad: transition forms	101
4	Sub-genres of the street ballad	105
4.1	Definition according to mode of communication; demarcation of presenter level of communication from the other textual speech situations	105
4.2	'Reporting' speech situation in the street ballad: the narrative street ballad	108
4.2.1	The explicit narrator and his subject of narration: types of comment, subjective emphasis in the first-person narrative	108
4.2.2	Structure and functional transparency of the subject of narration: chronology, logic of events, motivational and thematic links, comic emphasis, presentation of figures	123
4.2.3	Overriding importance of the event and reduction of the figure in the 'news ballad'	146
4.3	Performative speech situation in the street ballad: semi-dramatic, dramatic and discursive street ballad	163
4.3.1	Role-play ballad: conflict situation and expression of opinion specific to the situation	163

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-17744-3 - The Rise of the English Street Ballad, 1550-1650

Natascha Wurzbach

Table of Contents

More information

Contents	ix
4.3.2 Dialogue ballad: dialogue action and perspectives of opinion	187
4.3.3 Discursive street ballad: arrangement of examples according to theme; medley; advice ballad; religious exhortation ballads	194
4.4 Classification and survey of street-ballad types: feature matrix	221
5 Pragmatic genre definition of the street ballad and its cultural and historical position	227
5.1 Genre characteristics: personalization of the message, and functional transparency as a procedure specific to the street ballad as a literary medium	227
5.2 Textual intention and audience expectation: entertainment, instruction, topicality	234
5.3 Changes within the genre 1550–1650: secularization of content and textual strategies; the speaker as a literary expression of contemporary individualism	236
6 Reputation of the street ballad: views of contemporary writers	242
Appendix: Documents relating to the street ballad: literary and cultural criticism between 1550 and 1700	253
Notes	285
Bibliography: 1 Primary texts	323
1.1 Street ballads treated in the main text	323
1.2 Editions of street-ballad texts	339
1.3 Source material for reception history	341
1.4 Further primary texts	344
2 Secondary literature	345