

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-18072-6 - Women, Property, and Confucian Reaction in Sung and Yuan China
(960-1368)

Bettine Birge

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

List of Maps, Figures, and Tables	page xiv
Chronology of Chinese Dynasties	xvi
Abbreviations	xvii
Acknowledgments	xix
Introduction	1
Historical Context	4
Contours of Change at the National Level	4
Local Conditions: The Prefecture of Chien-ning, Fukien	18
Chu Hsi (1130–1200) and the Learning of the Way (Tao-Hsüeh)	24
Women's Property: Conceptions, Language, and Significance	31
The Language of Minimization	31
The Economic Significance of Women's Property	37
1 Women and Property before the Sung:
Evolution and Continuity	41
Chou Feudalism and Confucian Ideals	42
Han Dynasty Developments: Communal Living, Common Property	46
Dowry versus Betrothal Gifts	51
T'ang Inheritance and Property Law	53
Conclusion	60
2 Women and Property in the Sung:
Legal Innovation in Changing Times	64
Sung Law and the Legal System	66
Transmission of Wealth to Women	76
Daughters and Sons in Family Division	76

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-18072-6 - Women, Property, and Confucian Reaction in Sung and Yuan China
(960-1368)

Bettine Birge

Table of Contents

More informationContents

Daughters' Inheritance by Testament and Legal Protection of the Property of Minors	94
Inheritance by Daughters without Surviving Brothers	97
New Provisions for Daughters in Cut-off Households	98
Intervention of the State	104
Daughters and Posthumous Heirs	109
Women's Property within Marriage	113
Taking Property out of a Marriage after the Husband's Death	115
Remarriage and the Law	125
Separate Property within Marriage While the Husband Was Alive	127
Divorce	130
Disposition of Dowry When a Wife Died without Heirs	134
Conclusion: Property, Gender, and the Law	138
3 Women's Property and Confucian Reaction in the Sung	143
Patrilineality and Daughters' Inheritance	144
Opposition to Private Property within Marriage	150
Chu Hsi's Encouragement of Dowry Donation	151
Dowry Donation and the Learning of the Way Fellowship	153
The Growing Concern over Dowry during the Sung	161
Learning of the Way Ideals and Women as Household Bursars	169
Northern Sung Discourse on Women as Household Managers	169
Chu Hsi and Women's Roles in the Household	174
Chu Hsi's Contemporaries and Followers	179
Huang Kan's Enforcement of Learning of the Way Ideals	185
Conclusion	197
4 Transformation of Marriage and Property Law in the Yüan	200
Marriage and the Levirate in Mongol and Chinese Society	201
Law in the Yüan Dynasty	208
Family Property and Daughters' Inheritance	217
Inheritance in Cut-off Households	220
Women's Separate Property in Marriage	228
Changing Laws on Marriage and Property in the Yüan	229

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-18072-6 - Women, Property, and Confucian Reaction in Sung and Yuan China
(960-1368)

Bettine Birge

Table of Contents

More informationContents

Stage 1: Separation of Mongol and Chinese Law, 1260 to the End of 1271	230
Stage 2: Mongolization of the Law and Universal Application of the Levirate, 1271–1276	238
Stage 3: Reassertion of Chinese Values and Lenient Enforcement of the Levirate, 1276–1294	245
Stage 4: The Confucian Transformation of Marriage and Property Law, 1294–1320	253
Stage 5: The Exaltation of Chastity in the Late Yüan	273
Post-Yüan Developments	277
Conclusion	279
Conclusion: Gender, Mongols, and Confucian Ideals	283
Bibliography	297
Glossary-Index	329