

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19954-4 - Imperial Sceptics: British Critics of Empire, 1850-1920

Gregory Claeys

Table of Contents

More informationContents

Acknowledgements	page ix
List of abbreviations	xi
Introduction: audi alteram partem : imperialism and the moral imagination
Anti-imperialism: the state of play	I
The two debates in foreign and colonial policy	10
Some strands of imperial scepticism	21
Conclusion	45
1 Positivist diplomacy	47
Comte, humanity and empire	47
Congreve and anti-imperialism	58
International Policy (1866)	62
India, Ireland, Egypt	66
The work of Harrison, Beesly and Quin	83
Universal Home Rule: carving empires into republics	97
Intervention and non-intervention	104
‘Little England’ and the analysis of empire	112
Conclusion	122
2 Socialism and empire: from Little England to socialist commonwealth, 1850–1920	124
Introduction	124
Marx and his legacy	131
Hyndman and the SDF	140
Ernest Belfort Bax: Positivism, Marxism and the nationalist controversy	159
William Morris and the Socialist League	168
Clarion call: Robert Blatchford	172
The Fabians, their friends, some allies and malcontents	180
The ILP: Macdonald, Hardie and some others	198
Other socialist contributions to the debate	208
Socialism and Little England	219
Conclusion	224

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-19954-4 - Imperial Sceptics: British Critics of Empire, 1850-1920

Gregory Claeys

Table of Contents

More information

viii

Contents

3	Contextualising Hobson: civilisation, utility and socialist imperialism	235
	The formation of Hobson's critique of capitalist imperialism, 1894–1902	236
	Imperialism. A Study : civilisation and exploitation justified	245
	Hobson as socialist imperialist	260
	Hobson, Positivism and the ethics of humanity	271
	Conclusion	281
	Conclusion: the fruits of imperial scepticism: more sovereignty and less	282
	Bibliography	291
	Index	327