ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book has been revised from the thesis which I submitted for the Ph.D. degree at Cambridge University in the summer of 1972. My work was made possible by a grant from Tel Aviv University and the Memorial Foundation for Jewish Culture. The field work in Greece, Turkey and the Middle East was supported by awards from the Faculty of Classics at Cambridge University and Gonville and Caius College. To all these I owe my thanks.

I find it a very pleasant duty to express my deep gratitude to my supervisor, Mr G.T. Griffith of Gonville and Caius College, who generously devoted to me endless hours of discussion. Although the responsibility for faults and misjudgements rests solely with myself, I owe a great deal to his constructive criticism, and more than one of his ideas and remarks found their way into the book. I hope it can be construed as a not too inadequate return for his efforts and patience.

My appreciation extends to my examiners, Professor M.I. Finley of Jesus College, Cambridge, and Professor H.W. Parke of Trinity College, Dublin, for suggesting considerable improvements, and to the former for recommending publication of the book in Cambridge Classical Studies and guiding its transition from thesis to book; to Professor S. Perlman, Professor S. Simonsohn and Professor Z. Yavetz of Tel Aviv University, whose initiative enabled me to have leisure and facilities to complete this book; and finally to my teacher, guide and mentor, Professor J. Efron of Tel Aviv University, whose acuteness and extensive knowledge in Classics and Judaism provided valuable stimulation and guidance throughout the years.

I owe most to my wife, to whom this book is dedicated. She provided not only encouragement and help, but also the astringent criticism of a legal mind. Our constant discussions of almost every point made the process of writing more of a pleasure than an author has any right to expect.
