

Contents

Editors' preface	page ix
Preface	xi
Acknowledgments	xv
A note on notes	xvii

PART I
 AMERICA AND EUROPE: A HISTORY

1 American civilization: the impulse from Europe	3
--	---

PART II
 THE SOUTH IN SLAVERY AND IN FREEDOM

2 The slave plantation in American agriculture	33
3 Slavery and southern economic development: an hypothesis and some evidence	41
4 Labor productivity in cotton farming: a problem of research	51
5 The South in the national economy, 1865–1970	67
6 Capitalism: southern style	87

PART III
 CAPITALIST DYNAMICS OF THE RURAL NORTH

7 Breakthrough to the Midwest	103
8 Migration and a political culture	115
9 Technological knowledge: reproduction, diffusion, improvement	138
10 The true history of the northern farmer	161

Contents

PART IV

THE NORTH: DYNAMICS OF AN INDUSTRIAL CULTURE

11	New England: the Puritan progenitor	183
12	The industrial civilization of the Midwest	215
	I. Resources and technology	215
	II. Labor power in industrial markets	223
	III. Capital: real and financial	228
	IV. Industrial and market organization	240
	V. Social organization and values	245
	Epilogue. Dénouement and decline	250

PART V

AMERICAN VALUES IN A CAPITALIST WORLD

13	Political controls on a national economy	261
14	Nationhood in a common market	281
15	European industrialization in an American mirror	298

ANNEXES

A	A look backward. Quantification and the counter-factual in American agricultural history, 1850–1910: a re-examination	313
B	A look forward. Understanding productivity: the ways of economics and of history	334
Index		355