Acknowledgements

The best part of the work on this book was carried out in the stimulating quiet of the Institute for Advanced Studies in the Humanities, University of Edinburgh (1977) and at Clare Hall, Cambridge (1979–80) where I was Visiting Fellow. A generous grant from the Norwegian Research Council for Science and the Humanities – Norges Almenvitenskapelige Forskningsråd – enabled me to make good use of the leave of absence granted to me by the University of Bergen.

Two shorter sections were first published in the Yearbook of English Studies, 9, Theatrical Literature Special Number (1979) and in Contemporary Approaches to Ibsen, 4 (Oslo, 1979) and draft papers covering some of the ground were read at the 14th F.I.L.L.M. Congress, Aix-en-Provence, 1978, and at the British Comparative Literature Association's Conference at the University of Kent at Canterbury, 1980.

Sections of the manuscript were read by Peter Bilton, Jean Chothia, Christopher Gillie, Peter Holland, John Northam and Leo Salinger, whose specialist knowledge and personal interest were greatly valued by me. While there is not much in the book that is strictly linguistic, I have gained fresh understanding from the work of David Crystal and from conversations about 'conversation' with Rukmini Bhaya, Gillian Brown, Nils-Erik Enkvist and Roman Jakobson. Richard Holton Pierce kindly read the chapter on Greek tragedy at proof stage.
