ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I should like to thank Clare Hall, Cambridge, where I have been a Research Fellow during the writing of this book. I should also like to thank Peter and Ursula Dronke for their several fertile suggestions in the earliest phase of this book; and John Beer for many kindnesses and Coleridgean 'aids to reflection' during the time I have been in Cambridge. John Rosenberg sympathetically read and indispensably criticized the manuscript in its first, most tentative form. I am equally indebted to Michael Black for his painstaking and constructive reading of a later draft. Thomas McFarland kindly gave abundant advice on a number of points both before and after the publication of his own book on Coleridge. P. H. Gaskill generously permitted me to consult a portion of his thesis, then in progress, on Hölderlin's pietist milieu. Peter Dronke checked the accuracy of the translations from the Latin. The editors of Coleridge's Lectures 1795 On Politics and Religion, Peter Mann and Lewis Patton, and the English publishers of The Collected Coleridge, Routledge and Kegan Paul, were kind enough to make the text available to me before publication. Acknowledgement should also be made to the Librarian of Reading University, who permitted me to consult the microfilm copies of the Victoria MSS; and to the Librarian of Jesus College, Cambridge, who permitted me access to copies of Coleridge's notebooks. Mr A. H. B. Coleridge gave permission to quote from unpublished manuscript sources. George Whalley, the editor of the marginalia for The Collected Coleridge, generously helped to check my readings against the originals and his transcripts. I should like to thank him also for his kind permission to consult his thesis on Coleridge's reading (London, 1950). Kathleen Coburn kindly checked my readings of the MS notebooks against her authoritative transcripts. Some of the material in Chapter 3 was given as a paper delivered to the Congress of the Fédération Internationale des Langues et Littératures Modernes in 1969; a brief version of Chapter 5 was published in Victorian Studies (December 1972). Michael Loewe entrusted me with his handsome first edition of The Works of Sir William Jones. I should also like to express my gratitude to the Reverend Professor C. F. D. Moule, the Reverend John Sturdy, Dr Ernst Bammel, the Reverend Stephen Sykes, and especially Father Reginald Fuller, for their assistance on Biblical critical problems. Finally, to Lionel Trilling my debt of gratitude is longstanding and all-encompassing; any thanks I can render must be understood as truly apocalyptic abbreviation referring to the accumulated wisdom of the Fathers symbolo aenigmatico.

I wish also to acknowledge gratefully the help of Mrs Mildred Pickett, who typed out, against her conscience, the blasphemous matter of the higher criticism, and of Mrs Betty Sharp, who carried on when conscience struck again.

What I owe to the positive and present aid of my husband Brian Shaffer I might itemize at length; the depths of his forbearance I can only gratefully surmise.
