

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-31977-5 - Archaeology Yesterday and Today: The Development of Archaeology
in the Sciences and Humanities

Jaroslav Malina and Zdeněk Vašíček Translated and Edited by Marek Zvelebil

Table of Contents

More information

Contents

	Foreword by A. F. Harding	page	xi
1	The search for arche		1
2	The earliest history		8
	A resolution		8
	The earliest forms of archaeology		9
	The concept of the past during the Middle Ages		12
	For humanism, the past is a source of nourishment as well as adornment		15
	Renaissance society		15
	Historiography		17
	History of art		18
	Archaeology before archaeology		19
	The Age of Enlightenment: knowledge about the past accumulates		22
	Political economy		22
	Philosophy		23
	Historiography		23
	Antiquarian archaeology		24
	The birth of modern archaeology		32
	Historiography		33
	Historical linguistics		35
	Archaeology		35
	The ascendancy of evolutionism		40
	The idea of evolution		40
	Evolution in sociology		41
	Evolution in ethnology		42
	Evolutionism in mythology and folklore		43
	Culmination of evolutionary thought		43

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-31977-5 - Archaeology Yesterday and Today: The Development of Archaeology
in the Sciences and Humanities

Jaroslav Malina and Zdeněk Vašíček Translated and Edited by Marek Zvelebil

Table of Contents

More information

viii	Contents
Linguistics as a cultural-historical discipline	46
Typological developments in archaeology	46
The emergence of field archaeology	47
Developments in chronology	50
The eclipse of evolutionism	51
Archaeology as a profession	53
Migrationist and diffusionist intoxication	54
Human geography and spatial anthropology	55
Development of the history of art	56
Space in sociology and linguistics	57
Diffusion in mythology and folklore	58
Linguistic palaeontology	59
Archaeology discovers space	60
3 A digression into the natural sciences	67
Uniformitarian and catastrophist theories in geology	67
Lamarckian and Darwinian evolution in biology	69
Biology since Darwin	73
Evolution of man	74
Early quantification and measurement in the natural sciences	76
4 More recent history: the twentieth century	78
Sources of inspiration for the twentieth century	78
Ethnology	79
Developments in psychology	82
Linguistics	85
Political economy	85
Historiography	86
History of art	87
Folklore	88
The analysis of prehistoric art	88
Ex oriente lux	90
Nature, the cradle of all things	91
The combustion model of prehistory	92
The revolutionary view: with leaps through stages	92
All things are measurable	93
5 The present	96
System, model, structure and symbol	96
Philosophy and methodology of science	97
Linguistics	97
Structuralism	100

Cambridge University Press

978-0-521-31977-5 - Archaeology Yesterday and Today: The Development of Archaeology
in the Sciences and Humanities

Jaroslav Malina and Zdeněk Vašíček Translated and Edited by Marek Zvelebil

Table of Contents

More information

Contents	ix
Folklore	101
Archaeology for archeologists	103
Archaeological sources can lie	105
The search for connections	109
Anglo-Saxon common sense	110
Theoretical hiatus: the Soviet case	113
The rise of New Archaeology: the opening of hostilities	114
Clarke's bomb	117
New Archaeology as a reflection of our times	119
Revolution by instalments	125
Space, behaviour, economic and social relationships	128
Structural and semiological inspirations	130
The return back home to settlement archaeology	132
French connection	134
New trends in the East	138
Current perspectives	146
6 Description, classification and seriation	149
Towards a broader understanding of archaeological sources	149
The nature of archaeological information	153
The meaning of description	159
The description of shape	168
The description of space	184
Seriation and time	187
Classification	193
A framework for basic information processing	206
7 Archaeological hypotheses	210
The construction and verification of hypotheses	210
The problem of archaeological terminology	217
Analogies and parallels	223
Experiment	224
Some further approaches	241
Hypotheses concerning prehistory	247
On communication and organisation	251
Things conscious and unconscious	257
Prehistory and history	261
8 Epilogue	269
Select bibliography	272
General Index	303
Index of names	312