

CONTENTS

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	Page x
PREFACE	xiii
1 The relevance of archaeological history	1
Approaches to the history of archaeology	4
The environment of archaeology	12
Archaeological interpretation	19
Challenge	25
2 Classical archaeology and antiquarianism	27
The ancient world	27
The medieval paradigm of history	31
Development of historical archaeology	35
Antiquarianism in Northern Europe	45
Recognition of stone tools	52
The Enlightenment paradigm	55
Scientific antiquarianism	61
Antiquarianism and romanticism	65
The New World	67
The impasse of antiquarianism	70
3 The beginnings of scientific archaeology	73
Relative dating	73
The development and spread of Scandinavian archaeology	80
The antiquity of humanity	87
Palaeolithic archaeology	94
Reaction against evolution	102
Archaeology in North America	104
Conclusion	108

Contents

4	The imperial synthesis	110
	The rise of racism	111
	Lubbock's synthesis	114
	Colonial archaeology in America	119
	Racist archaeology in Africa	129
	Archaeology in New Zealand	138
	Australian prehistory	141
	Lubbock's legacy	145
5	Culture-historical archaeology	148
	Diffusionism	150
	The Montelian synthesis of European prehistory	155
	The concept of culture	161
	Kossinna and the culture-historical approach	163
	Childe and The Dawn of European Civilization	167
	National archaeology	174
	Culture-historical archaeology in North America	186
	Technical developments	196
	Conclusions	205
6	Soviet archaeology	207
	Archaeology in tsarist Russia	208
	Archaeology during the New Economic Policy	212
	The birth of Soviet archaeology	216
	Consolidation	228
	Recent developments	234
	Conclusions	242
7	Functionalism in Western archaeology	244
	The development of social anthropology	245
	Environmental functionalism	247
	Economic approaches	250
	Childe and Soviet archaeology	254
	Childe as a Marxist archaeologist	259
	Grahame Clark	264
	Early functionalism in the United States	270
	The conjunctive approach	275
	Ecological and settlement archaeology	279
	Conclusions	286

Contents

8	Neo-evolutionism and the New Archaeology	289
	Neo-evolutionism	289
	The New Archaeology	294
	Systems theory	303
	Anti-historicism	312
	Cataclysmic archaeology	319
	Conclusions	326
9	The explanation of diversity	329
	Intersocietal contact	330
	Neo-historicism	337
	Idealism and neo-Marxism	340
	Contextual archaeology	348
	Archaeology as itself	357
	Conclusions	367
10	Archaeology and its social context	370
	The goals of archaeology	370
	Archaeology: history and science	372
	Relativist critiques	379
	Data collection and empirical generalizations	382
	Internal dialogue	386
	Limitations of behavioural inference	391
	The achievements of archaeology	396
	External dialogue	400
	Future prospects	407
	BIBLIOGRAPHICAL ESSAY	412
	REFERENCES	429
	INDEX	477