Acknowledgments

Many colleagues and friends contributed to this project. The case studies are the work of several very gifted interviewers: Eileen Pinkerton, Nancy Broomfield, Kitty Rowley, and Kim Thompson. Several research assistants helped in the data analysis, especially Michael Tracy, Clynta Jackson, and Paul Raper who did most of the content analysis of magazines. Barbara Metzger's intelligent editing improved my prose and Cheryl Larsson typed the manuscript with skill and good humor. A grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities supported the beginning stages of the work.

Steve Gordon, Arlie Hochschild, Lillian Rubin, and Ann Swidler helped me to start on this project by sharing their knowledge and their hunches. Conversations with Gary Thom, Graham Little, Scott Swain, and Wendy Lozano clarified my ideas. I benefited immensely from the reaction of colleagues and friends who read drafts of the book. Steven Gordon, Gerald Handel, Mark Poster, Francisco Ramirez, Rose Wendel, and Beatrice Whiting gave me thoughtful comments on an early draft, and the detailed criticisms and suggestions of Carol Browner, Rachel Kahn-Hut, Peggy Thoits, and Barbara Risman were especially helpful. Richard Almond, Albert Bergesen, and Norbert Wiley commented on several chapters, and my husband, Frank Cancian, helped me on every draft with careful, incisive criticisms and useful suggestions. Finally, I want to thank my husband and my friends Alyn Bartick, Ellie and Henry Fagin, Sally Hufbauer, and Judy Krieger, who read numerous drafts, endured my elation, obsession, and despair, and sustained me through this project.
