CONTENTS

vi. The Cases of Paul, Philo, the Essenes of Qumran, and the Sages of the Dual Torah

Proposition 3: The systemic importance of the category "Israel" depends on the generative problematic – the urgent question – of the system builders, and not on their social circumstance. The place of "Israel" within the self-evidently true response offered by the system will prove congruent to the logic of the system and that alone.

12. Society and System

i. How History Matters in Systemic Analysis: The Case of an "Israel"

239

ii. The Cases of Paul, the Essenes of Qumran, and the Sages of the Dual Torah

240

Hypothesis: The system builders' social (including political) circumstance defines the generative problematic that imparts self-evidence to the systemically definitive logic, encompassing its social component.
